Hoover Administration's "Big Gun" to Join NRA Drive.

Will Make Speech On Radio Sept. 27

(Copyright, 1933, by The Washington Post.)

The first big gun of the Hoover administration—right straight from the War Department—will boom for the NRA.

Col. Patrick Jay Hurley, former Secretary of War, has joined forces with his old "side-kick" of army days, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, in an effort to put the Blue Eagle over the top.

A carefully guarded secret, the first intimation of Col. Hurley's decision came late last night. Friends intimated that the fighting Irishman from Oklahoma is about to take off his coat and go to work for the people he fought not so many months ago.

"Going on Air" September 27.

The first shot from the Hurley howitzer will be fired September 27, when he goes on the air over a nation-wide hook-up. He will extoll the virtues of the NRA, and ask America to rally round the flag.

It is said in circles close to Col. Hurley that the invitation to join forces came directly from Gen. Johnson, who wants to present a united front to the enemy, Old Man Depression.

Hurley, in accepting, recalls that June 2, 1932, before the House Ways and Means Committee, he advocated the same method of approach to a national problem that is now being worked out by the Roosevelt administration.

At that time Col. Hurley pointed out the advisability of shortening the hours of labor—even advocating a 36-hour week—and of raising pay. He urged also a loosening of credit.

War Work Recalled.

In approaching Hurley, Gen. Johnson is said to have recalled their war work. Both were in the Judge Advocate General's Department. Hurley later went overseas. Johnson remained as an assistant to Gen. Crowder, rising to be the youngest brigadier general in the U. S. Army.

For more than 20 years Hurley and Johnson have been friends.

Lamont Quits Steel Institute

Officials Deny Resignation Designed as Protest on Industry Code.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Robert P. Lamont, Secretary of the Department of Commerce in the Hoover administration, resigned today as president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, a position he assumed a year ago.

In his letter of resignation Lamont said he felt he could be of "little help" in the present "practical and immediate demands" which face the iron and steel industry and which can best be met by "men familiar with the vast details."

Lamont's letter was addressed to Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of directors.

Officials of the institute said Lamont was not resigning in protest of the iron and steel code.

Uchida Resigns Tokyo Ministry

Koki Hirota Takes Over Foreign Portfolio.

Tokyo, Sept. 14 (Thursday) (AP).—Count Yasuya Uchida resigned today as foreign minister of Japan. Koki Hirota, former Ambassador to Moscow, was named his successor.

Failing health was given as the official explanation of Uchida's resignation, but reactionary pressure in favor of Hirota's succession was authoritatively considered an important factor in the change.

Hirota's accession to the foreign ministry is interpreted as presaging a Japanese foreign policy even more nationalistic and uncompromising than at present.

Uchida was former Ambassador to the United States and has held a score of important posts in the Japanese government. He once was president of the important South Manchuria Railway.

Communists Flay U. S. Cuban Stand

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Communist members of the Chamber of Deputies today proposed a resolution criticizing the United States' attitude towards Cuba, but it was defeated, 33 to 20.

McDowell Named Envoy to Ireland

Montana Mine Operator Goes to Free State.

W. W. McDowell, Montana Democratic leader and Butte mining operator, yesterday was named Minister to the Irish Free State by President Roosevelt.

McDowell was born in Trenton, Tenn. He went to the Rocky Mountains 37 years ago, developed Montana's first copper mine, and founded a fortune.

From 1909 to 1913, he was Speaker of the Montana House of Representatives. He served the party through four campaigns.

What is believed the first Montana copper mine, at Copperoppulus, was developed by McDowell. It later was incorporated in Anaconda properties.

McDowell has made his home first at Anaconda, and later at Butte.

Labor, Capital In Peace Pact On NRA Board

End of Row Expected to Speed U. S. Steps to Avert Strikes.

Settlement of the dispute between representatives of industry and labor on the advisory boards of the NRA was disclosed yesterday as drafting of a bituminous coal code made slow progress and it became known President Roosevelt intended to bring pressure on the mine operators.

Agreement between the industrial and labor leaders on a joint statement came at a time when recovery officials were seeking to speed functioning of governmental agencies to head off spread of strikes, "holidays" and controversies in coal and other industries.

The Pennsylvania coal arbitration board, set up by the President to settle the strike which grew out of trouble at the Frick Company mines in Pennsylvania several weeks ago, appealed to miners in southwestern Pennsylvania not to take the "holiday" they proposed. The miners proposed to force shutdown of the mines because of delay in framing the code.

Swope Issues Appeal.

Appeal was voiced by Gerard Swope, head of the board, but was not expected to have much effect as the miners had returned to work under an agreement which was to expire with completion of a code, or, at the latest, on September 1.

Labor leaders here refused comment on the situation but it was no secret they felt the operators, who have not reached an agreement among themselves, could not expect them longer to sit on the lid.

The miners charged the operators are forcing heavy production while the code negotiations drag. The result, they complain, will be that when a code finally is promulgated there will be little or no work and the miners will get little or no benefit from the prescribed shorter hours and higher wages.

Board Moves for Peace.

The National Labor Board, of which Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, is chairman, while engaged in efforts to settle disputes in the silk and shoe industries, was working to prevent widespread industrial warfare in the coal industry.

Language of the agreement was guarded, but it was learned it accepted as final the declaration of Gen. Johnson that the so-called merit clause of the automobile code would not be premitted in any other code.

Gen. Johnson is expected to take up the retail code this morning. This, like the oil and coal codes, contains price-fixing provisions, and the Consumers Advisory Board is fighting to prevent it going to the President until more study has been given the question.

Gen. Johnson yesterday fixed October 1 as the deadline for substitution of code under the President's reemployment agreement.

Macon Finishes Cruise Over New York District

U. S. Envoy Dunned For Price of Shave

The "richest Government in the world" has taken to 25-cent duns.

Yesterday Elliot Thurston, member of the official delegation to the London Economic Conference, received a Government form letter from the State Department, Paris, accounting office. It informed him he owed it 25 cents, and requested payment.

The letter pointed out travel allowances change to ocean rates on sailing. An overdraft of 25 cents had been made and the State Department held up that sum in Paris accounts.

U. S. Is Ready To Fix Prices In Oil Battle

Government Not Afraid to Act, Secretary Announces.

(Associated Press.)

Price wars within the oil industry, apparently spreading about the country, last night brought the administration to the verge of Federal price fixing to stabilize the petroleum world.

Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, ordered an immediate survey of reports of price-cutting fights, while President Roosevelt approved a revision of the NRA oil code giving the administration full power to set prices where it wished.

Ickes talked over revisions and price wars with the President in mid-afternoon.

Meanwhile, the planning and coordination committee of 15, which supervises the industry under the trade program wrote its recommendations for price schedules.

California Starts War.

Ickes said the committee had been told a price war had broken out in California and was extending along the Pacific Coast.

"There also appears to be underselling in Brooklyn and in other sections of the country," Ickes added.

"I am not prepared to express any opinion except to say I hope that if any oil interests are involved in price wars, they are not violating the petroleum code that only a few days ago they all subscribed to.

"Here is a situation where all of us must keep clear heads and refrain from rocking the boat."

On leaving the White House conference, Ickes made it clear the administration would not hesitate to fix prices if and when necessary, and the broad revision approved yesterday was regarded as indicative of action immediately.

Consumers Get Protection.

In revisions provision was made for protecting all consumers, competitors and employes.

The planning committee, which has been working on price recommendations, expected to have them ready for Ickes today, with differentials for petroleum types and geographic areas.

They took up another question yesterday—the refusal of the Texas Company, one of the companies opposed to price-fixing, to submit operating and cost data that had been requested informally.

E. B. Reeser, Tulsa, a member, told the committee that W. S. S. Rogers, president of the Texas, had informed him the company would not supply the information, and this decision was made after discussion with the board and officers.

Calls Situation Bad.

What action will be taken by the committee, which has power to demand the reports, remains to be determined. It had not formally requested the data.

K. R. Kingsbury, president of the Standard of California, who had been informed of a price war on the West Coast, said the situation was "very bad," adding:

"Dealers started the war and have given away, in some cases, all their four-cent (a gallon) margin. The price war has been spreading and there is danger it will spread to the crude oil market, disturbing the whole petroleum situation on the Coast."

30,000 Miners Vote "Holiday" As Code Lags

Pricedale, Pa., Sept. 13 (AP).—Representatives of more than 30,000 miners in southwestern Pennsylvania's great bituminous coal belt voted late today to take a "holiday" until an agreement is reached on the coal code.

Meeting in Hungarian Hall, 250 delegates, representing 84 United Mine Workers' locals in Fayette, Westmoreland, Greene, Washington and Allegheny Counties, decided solidly to remain out of the pits.

The decision was cheered by a throng of 3,500 milling about the hall, and then the men marched to Gaul's Field, a half mile away, for a mass meeting.

Already 20,000 miners have laid down their tools, and leaders of the "holiday" movement predicted virtually every mine in the district will be closed tomorrow.

Men said they would return to their homes peacefully and await developments in Washington, where operators and union heads are attempting to negotiate a code.

2,300 Miners to Return.

St. Charles, Va., Sept. 13 (AP).—Twenty-three hundred men who were idle during the mine closedowns which swept the St. Charles coal field several weeks ago, will be at their work tomorrow.

Johnson Promises Credit to Industry

Administration Declared Ready to Use Power.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said tonight the Government would assure necessary credit to industry.

Addressing the Merchants Association, the general said credit was the major problem under consideration in Washington.

If necessary, the recovery administrator declared, the Government will use its powers under the Federal Reserve act and the emergency banking act to force credit back into channels of industry.

New Zealand Woman Wins Parliament Seat

Wellington, New Zealand, Sept. 13 (AP).—The first woman member of the New Zealand Parliament was elected today in Lyttleton. She is Mrs. Elizabeth R. McCombs, who takes the seat made vacant by the death of her husband.

Mrs. McCombs ran as a Labor candidate and received 6,060 votes. Her nearest opponent got 3,480 votes.

Mute Paralytic, Lost 19 Years To Kin, Identified in Death

Victim of Mysterious Fate Saved From Potter's Field.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 13 (AP).—In death, a mute paralytic known only as "Ole Man Lubin" in the 19 years the Kenosha Hospital cared for him, today regained his identity.

No longer will his body lie in a potter's field grave, marked only by a simple wooden cross bearing the painted inscription, "Old Man Lubin," the name given him in 1918 when a soldier thought he recognized him as a former Kenosha bartender.

Instead, his body will rest in the Jewish Cemetery here and the marker will bear the name Hyman Marks.

The news story saying the invalid died August 11 was the clew to Marks' fate which relatives in Milwaukee and Chicago—only an hour's ride away—sought since he disappeared the winter of 1914.

They came here, induced Coroner James A. Crossin to open the grave, viewed the body today and made positive identification. A scar over the left eye was the determining factor.

Marks was found along a road near here one bitterly cold night 19 years ago. Paralysis had left him mute and his arms so crippled he could not write. He was unable to tell that his niece in Milwaukee, just 37 miles away, had put him on a train for New York; unable to tell that his daughter and his stepdaughter lived in Chicago.

He was taken to the hospital and remained there until death.

District Gets $1,659,915 In Tax Money

Release of Gas, Water Cash by Douglas to Save 700 Jobs.

Granting of Application Permits Early Work on Many Projects.

Director of the Budget Lewis W. Douglas last night released $1,659,915 in gasoline and water tax funds of the District to the District Commissioners.

This means the saving of the jobs of 700 permanent District employes in the streets and highways division and the water department and employment of others, number not estimated, in the contract work it provides.

It also means the new Calvert street span project can be carried forward as fast as the Commissioners can arrange for the specifications and the contract.

Provided by Congress.

Congress had provided the money, subject to Douglas' approval. Application for it was made more than two months ago.

Until yesterday the Director of the Budget had given no indication that he would approve the allocation.

His approval is believed due to the efforts of Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, who has been pushing the project.

Douglas granted all that was authorized except $341,360 for street widening, which the Commissioners said already had been taken care of through a previous highway grant from the Public Works Administration.

Of the total allotment, $1,158,640 was from gasoline-tax funds and $501,275 from water-tax money.

Gas-Tax Disposition.

Calvert Street Bridge, $575,000.

Repairs to streets, $275,000. (These items will cause retention of 250 District employes who were slated for dismissal.)

Surfacing and resurfacing, $70,000

Repair and repaving of certain local streets, $117,900.

Water Allotments.

The following allotments are for the Water Department, which will result in recall of 450 men from furlough and who were about to be dismissed.

New pump at Anacostia Pumping Station, $15,000.

Construction of 30-inch water main on Eleventh street southeast, from K street across the Anacostia River to Nichols avenue and Good Hope road, $200,000.

Maintenance, $45,810.

New meters, $72,540.

Public and fire hydrants, $10,675.

Former Premier Assailed on Return From Russia.

Lives of U. S. Citizens Imperiled as Cuban Labor Rises in Revolt

Millions Join To Cheer NRA In New York

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—From early afternoon until within a half hour of midnight New York's myriad workers swept today in unbroken lines up Fifth avenue, following the sign of the Blue Eagle, in the greatest demonstration the United States has seen in the recovery program.

More than a quarter of a million persons—easily half of that number women—tramped along the path where Gen. Pershing and the Nation's World War heroes had marched 15 years ago.

But this time the cheers of the multitude of onlookers, estimated by police at between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000, were, for a peace-time army, massed to do homage to the NRA.

Johnson Reviews March.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, stood bareheaded in a red-white-blue stand before the public library and waved his approval, Beside him stood Grover Whalen, New York's NRA chief, and Mayor John P. O'Brien.

The crescendo of cheers was broken once, when Stock, Curb and Cotton Exchange workers passed and booed Mayor O'Brien. The mayor has been advocating a tax program which Richard Whitney, stock exchange president, said would drive brokers out of Wall street.

Rebuked for Boos.

"The action is disgraceful, especially on an occasion like this," commented the mayor to newspapermen. "Not only is this an insult to President Roosevelt and the NRA, but a direct insult to Gen. Johnson."

"It is none of my business to inquire at whom the boos were directed," said Gen. Johnson tonight. "It is unfortunate that this time should have been selected to give vent to the feelings of any particular faction in a local issue."

The administrator said he felt "quite certain" the booing was not directed at the NRA or himself.

"Let's forget it," he declared.

Vienna, Sept. 13 (AP).—Baron Louis Rothschild and his brother Alfons, members of the Vienna branch of the famous banking family, today turned over estates including roughly 33,000 acres to the Austrian government as a voluntary contribution toward covering losses of the Creditanstalt.

Baron Rothschild is a former president of the Creditanstalt which crashed in 1931, precipitating a general financial crisis and burdening the Austrian government with debts of approximately 1,000,000,000 schillings (currently about $162,000,000).

President's Offer to Quit Is Rejected in Ecuador

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—President Juan de Dios Martinez Mera today made a conditional offer to resign, but a special congressional committee found his terms unacceptable.

The Herald said photographs of the 33 were posted in the club, surmounted by the words "If you meet one of them, kill him," and "If he is a Jew break every bone in his body."

D. C. Brothers Avenge Death

Track Down Suspects in Father's Slaying in Arkansas.

Today a gang of robbers are under arrest for the crime in Batesville, Ark. Lowland Ford, the policeman, and Fonce Ford, the fireman, returned home last night with tales of their thrilling experiences.

Early Friday their father, W. P. Ford, 68, was found semiconscious beside a railroad track near Batesville. He died a few hours after telling of a battle for his life against two men and two women.

It was learned that the elder Ford had been forced into an automobile by two men Friday night. The brothers enlisted aid of former home-town friends. Day and night they traced clues. Tuesday, 40 miles away, a hide-out was discovered. The same day, in Springfield, Mo., the hunted machine was overtaken. Its occupants were returned to Batesville and jailed.

The predicament of Americans in various sections of trouble-torn Cuba was the chief concern last night of United States officialdom.

Five hundred army officers, loyal to the De Cespedes regime, remained in the National Hotel, defiant of the new administration.

Labor troubles in the interior of Cuba accounted for 12 Americans in virtual state of siege.

John E. Nevin, Master News Writer, Dies

Great Public Leaders Knew Him as Friend and Colleague.

A newspaperman went out last night
While the wires were singing away.

John Edwin Nevin, 58, veteran newspaper corespondent, died early yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital from a stroke of paralysis suffered two weks ago. He was removed to Emergency Hospital, and then ordered removed to Mount Alto by President Roosevelt.

A gallant knight of the newspaper game,
A lordly nature, an honored name,
Who wrote of fortune and fickle fame.

"Jack" Nevin, as he was known the world over, "covered" many outstanding events during his career. He was the friend and confident of President Wilson and other statesmen.

He wrote of honor, and greed, and shame,
Of good and bad, of wild and tame,

Soldier and Friend.

Organizer of the International News Service, and once chief of the Washington Bureau, Nevin was outstanding "flash man" during the World War, handling all the big stories emanating from the Capital. When President Wilson went to Europe Nevin accompanied him.

He was a personal friend of William Jennings Bryan and accompanied "the Commoner" on many speaking tours. In the Spanish War Nevin had served as "one of the boys in blue," coming back to the newspaper game immediately after hostilities.

A gallant soldier, always the same,
To those unknown and to those with name,

Colleagues Honor Him.

In recent years, "Jack" Nevin had been Washington correspondent for Midwestern newspapers. He was organizer of the White House Correspondents Association and served as its president during the Coolidge administration. He also was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the National Press Club.

Mr. Nevin is survived by his wife, Mrs. Clara Smith Nevin, and three sons, John, jr., Joe and Donald, who live in Clarendon, Va. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m., Friday, at his home. Delegations from the Press Club and White House Correspondents will attend.

In cloak of darkness, beyond all sight,
A newspaperman went out last night
To cover his final story right,
While the wires were singing away.

Kentucky House Kills Relief Tax Plan Again

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 13 (AP).—The gross receipts tax bill, backed by Gov. Ruby Laffoon, to raise $3,000,000 for relief, was defeated, 48 to 50, by the Kentucky House today. It was the second defeat for the measure, bitterly opposed by the Kentucky Merchants' Association. The bill came up today for reconsideration under suspension of the rules.

All other proposals to raise the $3,000,000 required by the Federal Government before it will advance Kentucky $8,000,000 also have been defeated in the month since the special session began. Some 400 unemployed, who came here from northern Kentucky Labor Day and demanded relief, were en route here again today and reports were that delegations were being formed in the western Kentucky coal fields to come to the capital.

A man identifying himself as Dr. Edward F. Smith, and his assistant, Betty G. Landis, were taken into custody by police last night after complaints had been received that the couple was bilking people under promise of hiring them as traveling companions for patients.

Police were told the couple, who had temporary offices in the Stratford Hotel, advertised for traveling companions to patients going to California and elsewhere.

In each case, police were told, an applicant when accepted was required to post a small sum of money, which was never returned. Police said they probably would be charged with larceny after trust.

Welles to Stay In Cuba Until Order Prevails

(Associated Press.)

Sumner Welles, ambassadorial trouble shooter of the Roosevelt administration in the Cuban field, was given orders from the State Department yesterday to remain at his Havana post indefinitely, or until complete calm and stability were restored in the island.

Secretary Hull, after reports of unrest and business paralysis in widely separated Cuban sectors, told newspapermen there were no present plans for Welles' return.

From unofficial sources word was received in the Capital that the new Cuban government might be approaching a financial crisis. It was pointed out no collection of taxes had been possible in recent weeks and that little, if any, funds would be left after the army had been paid.

Cancellation of the ambassador's plan to come home this week or next was accepted here as indicating the administration's disquiet over continued turmoil in the island.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have watched developments to determine whether the new government of President Grau San Martin would gain full support of the Cuban people, and whether it could restore order. Both have set this as the test for recognition.

Beauty Schools Hit Hairdressers

Protest NRA Code Offered by Association.

Protesting against the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association alleged attempt to dictate the conduct of the beauty culture schools, Washington beauty culture school owners have voted to rejeet the suggested hair dressers' code as it applied to beauty schools.

The school owners unanimously adopted a resolution objecting to interference by the national association on the grounds that their schools were educational institutions and not subject to any control by the hairdressers. A copy of the resolution will be presented to the director of the National Industrial Recovery Administration with a request that the school owners prepare their own code for submission.

The resolution was signed by Mrs. Mabelle Honour, Theodore Honour, Wilfred Honour, E. M. Bardnell, Miss N. Weir, M. Bennett and James Chirielese.

Isadore Saks, Store Founder, Dies in Jersey

He died after a two weeks' illness. He and his wife, Mrs. Ida Saks, celebrated their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary last week.

Mr. Saks, who started the store here 65 years ago with his brother, Andrew, retired last year from the presidency of the company, which also operates Saks Fifth Avenue store in New York.

Born in Baltimore, he lived in Washington for 50 years before moving to New York in 1908. He was a charter member of the Washington Board of Trade and a director of the Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Mr. Saks started his business career as a newsboy. The store here was the beginning of a chain of large establishments in New York, Indianapolis, Norfolk and Richmond.

During the McKinley administration he declined appointment as District Commissioner.

Besides his wife, Mr. Saks is survived by a son, Joseph I. Saks, and two grandchildren. Burial will be at New York tomorrow.

New Cuban Revolt Perils Americans

a destroyer, is in port against an emergency. Across the harbor at Rente, several American families have sought refuge, hurrying from the nearby mining districts as labor unrest continued to grow.

The reports reaching authorities in Havana stressed the "potential danger" of labor unrest, but emphasized also that no American had been injured or assaulted.

The round-up of labor troubles over the island showed also that about 20 per cent of the sugar mills were affected. They are the main mills, producing about 50 per cent of Cuba's sugar export.

Strikes in several districts have been settled temporarily, but the American owners contend they are making settlements with the unruly labor elements only under duress. They feared four months hence, when the new crop will be handled, it will be impossible to pay the high wages demanded, due to low sugar prices.

Troubles Complicated.

The government's situation was further complicated by the attitude of the Union Nacional Del Trabajo, claiming to represent "morally" some 600,000 sugar workers. The union sharply protested the present "miserable salary of 20 cents a day" for 12 hours' work, and demanded an eight-hour day, with wages from $1 to $1.50.

Labor elements in various localities have demanded improved pay and working conditions which American owners insist they can not grant. At Santiago stevedores demanded increases within 72 hours At Antilla, the banana workers gave the United Fruit Co. until Saturday to meet wage demands.

Americans Guarded.

At Vertientes, the Sugar Central was guarded by the strikers themselves, who also protected the homes of Americans there.

An optimistic report was issued, declaring reports from the provinces indicated the majority of the strikes had been settled, the laborers obtaining improved conditions, after the companies had proved it economically possible to pay increased wages.

Sleep Plague Passes Crest; 138 Fatalities

Health Officials Report Drop in Number of New Cases.

St. Louis, Sept. 13 (AP).—Possibility that the sleeping sickness epidemic may have passed its crest in St. Louis County was noted by experts today.

Only a dozen new county patients were reported in the last 24 hours, while the city reported 25.

Fatalities stood today at 138 and the number of cases at 799, of which 441 are in the county and 358 in St. Loulis.

A lull in the number of new cases has been noted since the middle of last week, the health council said.

U. S. Officials Report Gains

(Associated Press.)

Surg. Gen. Hugh S. Cumming yesterday reported "satisfactory progress" in the medical and the scientific attacks on encephalitis in St. Louis.

The surgeon general said the second generation of monkeys inoculated had not had time to show transmission of the disease. If the disease can be carried on in the monkeys, it may make possible a study which may result in the solution of its nature and the development of a serum for its treatment, scientists say.

Date for Hamilton Opening Due Soon

New $5,000 Subscription Announced by Bank Officials.

An opening date for Hamilton National Bank may be expected within a week, it was announced yesterday by the new institution.

Harry Kaufman, Inc., department store, 1316-1320 Seventh street northwest, has subscribed $5,000 in stock to aid the opening of the new bank, it was announced. Mr. Kaufman was prominent in the organization of Seventh Street Savings Bank, one of seven banks in the Hamilton consolidation plan.

Officials of Franklin National Bank, endeavoring to secure Treasury Department approval to reopen independently, denied yesterday the institution is contemplating suit against the Treasury Department to force its reopening.

Repeal Forces Center Fights On Ten States

Only Seven More Needed in Steady Parade; Elections Set.

(Associated Press.)

Jubilant over victories in Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado, repeal forces yesterday concentrated on the ten States to vote on the prohibition question between now and November 7.

Tuesday's elections in Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado brought to 29 the number voting in unbroken succession to abolish the eighteenth amendment, and only seven more need follow suit.

Senator Huey P. Long announced in Louisiana that a special session of that State's Legislature would be called in a few days to set up machinery for repeal ratification. Long predicted Louisiana would ratify before October 15.

The ten States in which elections have been called are Idaho and New Mexico, September 19; Virginia, October 3; Florida, October 10, and Kentucky, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Utah, November 7.

Thirty-six States must ratify repeal formally. Ratification is done in conventions, the thirty-sixth of which is scheduled for December 6.

Minnesota Joins March.

St. Paul, Sept. 13 (AP).—Large majorities in urban centers today had swung Minnesota into line with 28 other States favoring repeal.

A margin of about 2 to 1 in yesterday's special liquor law referendum, with two-thirds of the precincts in, vanquished dry forces in the home State of Andrew Volstead, coauthor of the prohibition enforcement law. Reports from 2,686 of the State's 3,693 precincts, gave: For repeal, 343,305; against, 177,591.

Predominant repeal sentiment in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, with the counties containing those centers, Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis, nullified the rural vote that sometimes showed surprising dry strength.

Colorado Figures Given.

Denver, Sept. 13 (AP).—Reports tonight from 1,448 precincts out of 1,547 in the State showed this vote on eighteenth amendment repeal: For, 130,650; against, 61,143.

Complete returns from 45 of 63 counties placed 32 on the repeal side and 13 in favor of retention of the eighteenth amendment.

Farming counties in northern eastern and southeastern Colorado generally voted against repeal. The rest of the State, led by Denver's four to one majority, with a few western Colorado counties excepted, voted wet.

Metal mining counties voted for repeal. Lake, of which Leadville is the county seat, returned a 17 to 1 repeal majority.

Why Vote? Asks Montana.

Helena, Mont., Sept. 13 (AP).—There will be no prohibition repeal election in Montana this fall, Gov. Cooney said today, scanning news dispatches about the repeal movement.

"Montana," the governor said, "won't need to vote. It will be in the basket by November 7 and we can use our $100,000 to feed the needy." The amount referred to is the estimated cost of a special election.

Farley Hails Governors.

(Associated Press.)

Messages of congratulations on results of the repeal vote were wired to governors and Democratic leaders of Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado yesterday by Postmaster General Farley.

Farley said he wired Gov. Seligman, New Mexico, and Gov. Ross, Idaho, asking them to urge Democratic workers to cooperate with Republicans and Independents in the repeal move.

Jouett Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, hailed Tuesday's results as evidence "repeal will be an actuality not later than December 6."

Ritchie to Rush Action.

Baltimore, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Gov. Albert Ritchie indicated today, after the overwhelming wet vote of Maryland in Tuesday's repeal election, that he would call a special session of the Legislature to enact liquor-control laws before December. The eighteenth amendment, according to current indications, will cease to be effective on December 6.

The total Maryland vote was not available tonight, but the wet margin was more than 5 to 1 and some districts ran as high as 68 to 1. Only two counties, Dorchester and Garrett, voted dry.

Florida Dry Enters Race.

Tallahassee, Fla., Sept. 13 (AP).—Wet hopes that Florida drys would allow the October 10 election to go by default vanished today as Dr. R. F. Goddard, of Quincy, qualified as a candidate for the convention. He filed a petition, signed by 500 voters. Full lists of candidates for and against repeal are expected to be filed within the next few days.

Louisiana Votes by Oct. 15.

New Orleans, Sept. 13 (AP).—Louisiana will vote on repeal before October 15.

This was assured today in announcements by Senator Huey P. Long and Gov. O. K. Allen that the Legislature would be called early next month to adopt a resolution calling for a State convention. The Legislature also will be called on to enact a liquor control law.

Taxes from liquor sales would go to schools and hospitals, said Senator Long.

Divided Between Children and Widow of Plumbing Firm's Head.

An estate of $108,766.88 was left by Thomas Somerville, head of the plumbing firm of that name, it was disclosed yesterday when his will was filed for probate.

The will provided that the estate was to be divided into six equal parts after payment of small bequests. These are to go to his five children, and his widow, Mrs. Anna May Somerville, who is also to receive the family home at 5600 Sixteenth street northwest.

The children's shares will be paid to them when they reach the age of 25, while that of Mrs. Somerville is to be held in trust for her until she dies or marries. The will directs that in the event there is a contest over the will, the contestant shall be cut off with nothing.

U. S. to Confer On Arms Pact

Davis Will Talk With British and French Officials.

London, Sept. 13 (AP).—The preliminary disarmament talks initiated by Great Britain, it was learned tonight, were planned with a view of ironing out such questions as arose at Geneva last March.

These conversations will be continued in Paris, where Mr. Davis and Capt. Eden will learn the French viewpoint.

The main points of the British disarmament plan are:

An army of 200,000 for Germany, twice the number set by the Treaty of Versailles.

Armies of the same strength for Italy and France, but with the latter permitted an overseas force of 200,000. Italy's overseas force would be 50,000.

Extension of the London Naval Treaty to include France and Italy.

Limitation of military airplanes to 500 for the United States, Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy.

Hurley Will Back Recovery Drive

Hurley claims that Gen. Johnson, whom he calls by his nickname, "High Jinks," is the best organizer in the country; that the NRA under Johnson is bound to succeed.

From those close to him it is understood his attitude toward the NRA is this:

"It is a splendid project, but demands the unstinted support of the American people, especially those people who are in the center ranks, the people who are neither very wealthy nor exceedingly poor. It needs someone to show them where they get off."

Man to "Turn Trick."

Gen. Johnson believes Pat Hurley is the man to turn this trick. The former Secretary of War is reputed to be the holder of vast realty properties that have suffered. Also, it is pointed out, he started out in life as a mine boy, worked his way up to the millionaire class, and now in his retirement is managing his own properties.

In his nation-wide broadcast, Hurley will be primed to make the speach of his life. He wants to do this for the American people, many of whom, he believes, misunderstand him. He wants to tell them his ideas of getting behind the government in a great crisis.

Full Clearance By New Year Is Seen for Banks

President Directs Drive to Reopen All Closed Institutions.

(Associated Press.)

At President Roosevelt's direction an intensive campaign to reopen the Nation's closed banks will begin in a few days.

The Chief Executive is confident that by January 1, when the system of [illegible]ed deposits becomes operative, all but a very few will be doing business.

The administration was described yesterday as ready to put the resources of the Government behind any institution not irremedially insolvent with the stipulation that the local community do its share.

The campaign will be in conjunction with prepartions for inaugurating the deposit guarantee system, which in Mr. Roosevelt's opinion offers an excellent opportunity for ascertaining the condition of and helping many banks not previously under the Treasury jurisdiction.

The directors of the Guarantee Corporation will see that no bank is admitted that will be a potential drain on the insurance pool.

Liquidity will not be considered, says Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the corporations board.

Processors Bear U. S. Supply Tax

(Associated Press.)

Comptroller General McCarl ruled yesterday that processing taxes on agricultural products purchased by the Government must be paid by the processor.

While the Government buys millions of dollars' worth of such products, the ruling came upon a comparatively small quantity of flour purchased for the Leavenworth Penitentiary. It will be applicable, however, to all Government purchases.

McCarl's ruling was based upon the fact that Congress made no appropriations for processing taxes.

In supplying the Army, Navy, the penitentiaries and other Government branches huge purchases are made annually.

U. S. to Aid Storm, Drouth Victims

(Associated Press.)

With approval of President Roosevelt, the administration's farm credit, public works and unemployment aid agencies went to work yesterday to provide relief for 150,000 suffering families in the drought and storm-stricken Dakotas, the Southwest and Florida.

The aid program, etsimated to involve a Federal-State-local cost of approximately $60,000,000, will be restricted to the drought and grasshopper-stricken areas of North and South Dakota, Texas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Kansas, and the hurrican-ridden regions of Texas and Florida.

Market Pact Violators Hit

U. S. Threatens Licenses of 50 Bolting Milk Firms in Chicago.

(Associated Press.)

Possibility that farm-adjustment administration officials would ask injunctions to restrain violators of marketing agreements developed yesterday as part of a general move to make the pacts more effective.

At the same time Secretary Wallace ordered approximately 50 Chicago milk dealers to show why their licenses should not be revoked or suspended on charges they had violated the milk-marketing agreement.

Most of those cited yesterday were small independent dealers in the city's suburbs, and although the specific charges were not made public, it was understood most of the milk handlers were paying lower prices to farmers than were set in the agreement and were also selling at lower retail prices than provided.

Milk Farmers Strike.

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP).—Five hundred farmers, dissatisfied with the Federal milk code and the prices it sanctions, quit shipping milk to the Chicago market from McHenry and Kane Counties today.

Peaceful but persuasive pickets gathered on the highways leading to country dairy depots and advised farmers to take their milk back home and demand a new deal from the distributors.

Announcement of organization of a new Washington-New York airline, to compete with Eastern Air Transport, will be made in a few days, The Post learned last night.

The line will be owned and operated by National Airport Corporation, which purchased both Washington and Hoover fields recently. Ships with a speed of 180 to 190 miles an hour will leave on hourly schedules in both directions.

Since taking over Ludington Lines, Eastern Air Transport has been without competition on the Washington-New York run.

Plans of National Airport and its holding company, National Aviation Corporation, to start an airline of their own here, are expected to hasten the combination of the two fields into a single, improved airport. At present they are separated by Military road. Washington's air terminal facilities have been criticized.

Sane Work

Psychologists Are Told Relief Jobs Have Saved Minds.

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP).—Figures to show that unemployment relief jobs, those created only to give temporary work, have saved the minds of many men were presented to the American Psychological Association yesterday.

The report was made by O. Milton Hall, of the Personnel Research Foundation, New York City. It covered a study of 360 unemployed men, average age 37, and 83 per cent of them college graduates.

"Sixty-three per cent of the men getting this relief work had better morale than the average of men needing but not getting relief. Work relief has by no means raised morale to the level maintained by employed men, but such relief appears to have saved it to a worthwhile extent."

Hitler Opens Hunger Fight

Insists Germans Donate Food to Jobless During Winter.

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP).—A campaign for unemployment relief the coming winter through a "fight against hunger and cold" by contributions from all the German people was launched today by Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

A threat of jail sentences was voiced against those refusing participation.

Among the plans outlined at a meeting of the cabinet and Nazi party leaders was one that the German people eat only the simplest food on the first Sunday of each month. The amount saved above the cost of 50 pfennigs will be contributed to a general relief fund to be used in all parts of the Reich and for all classes.

Thrift, Home Ownership Incentives Praised.

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP).—Greetings from President Roosevelt were read to members of the United States Building and Loan League at the opening of its convention today.

"Your responsibility," the President wrote, "for providing incentive to thrift and of financing home ownership on a sound basis has been imposed on you by millions of our citizens. It is a function, the importance of which has been given outstanding recognition in the recent recovery legislation. Your organized efforts should play an important part in guiding the building and loan movement through the present period of stress to new heights of service in the future."

Oyster Season Is Under Way On West River

August Storms Delayed Harvest, But Good Crop Is Expected.

"Oystering" has started on West River, but it will be next week before the harvest gets into full swing.

Stormy weather in August delayed the season several weeks, but the crop is expected to be good, according to old timers.

The boatmen are getting about 50 cents a bushel for their oysters at the plant, a fair average price. The shuckers are paid 25 cents a gallon, an increase of 5 cents over last year, and a shucker shucks from 10 to 15 gallons a day. The wholesale price for shucked oysters is $1.40.

After the oysters are shucked they are washed in large tanks 10 minutes and then packed. An ordinary tank handles about 250 gallons a day.

Turkey Forbids Return Of American Professor

Istanbul, Turkey, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Turkish government today forbade the return to Turkey of Dr. Edgar J. Fisher, Robert College professor.

The government declared an article in an American magazine discussed Turkey's new official history textbook in a manner displeasing to Turkish authorities and cited Dr. Fisher as the source of the information. He had been vacationing in the United States.

"Shopping News" Hit by Publishers

Fight Code Listing Group as Newspapers.

Los Angeles, Sept. 13 (AP).—Protest against the definition "advertising newspapers," as used by an organization known as the American Shopping News Publishers Association, Inc., in a code submitted to the NRA, has been filed with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Recovery Administrator, by the California Newspaper Publishers Association, Inc.

The protest said the great majority of the publications of the Shopping News concern were devoted exclusively to display advertising, and in no way might be defined as newspapers.

"We respectfully protest the usurping by throw-away advertising circulars of the historic and venerable name 'newspaper,' which, because it will be confusing to the public, will increase the unfair competition of such shopping news to newspapers, in our opinion," the complaint said.

School Heads Seek To Aid NRA Drive

(Associated Press.)

The answer to how the educator can clasp hands with Uncle Sam in recovery partnership was sought yesterday by George F. Zook, commissioner of education.

He's planning for various phases of that topic to be threshed out here tomorrow and Saturday at the National Council of State Superintendents.

Secretary Ickes will address the sessions. So will Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins.

The superintendents will discuss the report of the National Conference on Financing Education, which pictured the critical situation in the American system and advocated continuing, as well as emergency, Federal aid.

Rise in Farm Prices Sought By Roosevelt

Credit to Aid Expanded Industry Also Aim in New Drive.

(Associated Press.)

Satisfied that the climb definitely has started, President Roosevelt intends to put more power behind the recovery drive, with especial efforts directed toward bringing lagging agriculture into line with industry.

Sufficient credit for the needs of expanded industry and higher prices for the farmers, as well as the manufacturers, is the goal upon which full White House attention is directed.

Mr. Roosevelt is striving for this objective, but he does not look for full accomplishment in six months, or possibly a year, that will put all men back to work and fully restore commodity prices.

This authoritative White House exposition of policy was regarded as meaning there would be expansion of credit and prices on a steady, gradual basis, with an avoidance if violent fluctuations.

Mr. Roosevelt has given orders for the Government to back up the capital structure of any needy banks to make certain the required credit is pushed out.

Race Leaders Find Balloon

Bag Draped Over Trees in Canada Can Be Salvaged.

Lac St. Joseph, Quebec, Sept. 13 (AP).—Capt. Francisek Hynek and Lieut. Z. Burzynski, Polish aeronauts who apparently won the James Gordon Bennett balloon race, today sighted their bag from an airplane in the Laurentian woods and then laid plans to salvage it.

The balloon was sighted hanging in the trees about 30 miles northeast of Riviere a Pierre. From their landing place the Poles walked approximately 90 miles before they struck a railroad line at Lemieux.

After definitely establishing location of the balloon the Polish fliers returned here to hire men to assist in hauling the bag to Lac Bon Lac, 100 miles northwest of Quebec City.

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle was one guest of honor tonght at a dinner of the American Chemical Society, Chcago section. He recently landed in Connecticut, after a balloon flight from Chcago, winning a probable second place in the James Gordon Bennett races.

50 Army Posts Will Be Closed In Saving Plan

Program of Redistribution of Troops Carefully Guarded.

(Associated Press.)

Around a nucleus of 50 permanent army camps, to be improved and expanded through an allotment of $50,000,000, President Roosevelt yesterday planned a redistribution and solidification of land forces.

Such a flurry of objections attended an announcement in 1931 by the then Secretary of War, Patrick J. Hurley, that 53 Army posts were to be abolished that only 5 stations were abandoned.

Names of the stations to be abandoned under the present consolidation, however, were guarded both at the White House and the War Department.

There are now approximately 210 Army stations in the United States. Some of them, however, are listed in War Department records as on a "care-taking or inactive status," with only the remaining 150 employed as troop concentration points.

French Gendarmes Halt Barge Strike

Conflans-Ste-Honorine, France, Sept. 13 (AP).—A river blockade by striking bargemen was broken up today by gendarmes, who arrived from Paris in ten buses, several squads of mounted guards, and five fire trucks loaded with men.

The bargemen were so astonished by the impressive parade, which included several ambulances, that they offered no resistance.

Cost of Relief In Washington Up One-Fourth

Trend Runs Opposite to Other Cities in August.

Washington's relief bills in August were more than a quarter greater than July, although total urban relief costs for the whole country increased by only 6 per cent, the Federal relief administration reported yesterday.

The number of persons and families aided increased by 19.1 per cent. The consolidated report for the country as a whole showed that the number of needy cases had decreased by 2.9 per cent. This is the second month that Washington relief needs have increased while nation-wide needs were declining.

The number of needy cases in Washington in July was 10,878, and the money spent on them was $218,913. In August the number grew to 12,956 cases, with a relief bill of $278,867. This was an increase of 27.4 per cent in the cost of relief.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, explained that Washington's relief bills were higher because the city now had more money to spend on aid to the unemployed. While the relief money is still not adequate, more families can be helped because funds have increased. This means that the demand for relief has not necessarily grown, but that the city is coming nearer to meeting a steady demand.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-mark Applied For)

By Morgan Baker

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Chicago, Sept. 13 (Spl.).—Kaffee-Klatch at the bier stube in the Bismarck Hotel started the day for winners in the Federal Diary popularity contest, Miss Beulah Myles and Francis Panneton, where happenings of the night before were compared—and what a night

A ride on the north and south lagoons in motorboats operated by the Progress Amusement Co. followed dinner. While boating, fireworks—displayed on Northerly Island, an artificial spot which required 18 months to build—were enjoyed.

Short rides in sedan chairs took the party to the Streets of Paris for a wee touch of real night life of the fair. This is a perfectly constructed amusement place and, down to the most minute detail, typifies the old Latin Quarter of Paris. Funny little shops, flower markets, chestnut venders, meandering artists, peep shows, cafes—and what have you?

At the Cafe de la Rotonde the group was greeted by a stringed trio composed of Messrs. Hook, Krueger and Hollingsworth and three young harmonizers, Misses Moore, Cleverie and La Pierre.

Harry's Bar, typically Apache, was next on the list. This place is the "Broadway" of Chicago, as it is said if one waits long enough in the bar eventually every one who visits the fair will be seen.

After such a strenuous night every one was tired, and the morning was spent catching up on sleep. The fair grounds were visited about midafternoon and the kissing contest held at the Mexican Village was looked in on to have photographs made of Miss Myles and Mr. Panneton by Wide World Photo Service.

Talk of a show after dinner in the Belgian Village was in the lineup for Mr. Panneton and his companion, and Miss Myles again was to be guest of honor at a dinner followed by dancing.

The Found Code.

(Sequel to "The Lost Code.")

Seated again at my typewriter
At the close of a busy day,
Dreaming of better times to come
With our regular leave and pay,
My thoughts once more were centered
On my furloughed fellowmen,
And like a flash of light in the darkness,
I became inspired again.

And the air seemed filled with the magic
Of dreams about to come true,
As my fingers sought the lettered keys
For the words I would find anew.
And then from the soul of the typewriter,
Came those words I had lost one day:
"Be of good cheer, ye Federal folks,
Your hope is the NRA.

"Its strong arms will reach out to protect you,
No further decrease will it seek,
E'en though your hours be lessened
To create a five-day week.
And then'll disappear the furloughs,
And your minds of their fears unload.
F. D. will see that justice is done
With his efficient NRA Code.

By Miss Mathilde Carpenter.

Board Urges Lower Rents In Three Cases

Utilities Commission Seeks Cuts After Probe Here.

Rent reductions in three cases investigated by James Ring, rent investigator, were recommended yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

In one case, a small row house, a reduction from $37.50 to $30 per month was recommended. For the two others, occupied by colored tenants, the commission recommended $5 and $2.50 reductions.

In a fourth case the commission declared that the rent was reasonable. It was for a home in Cleveland Park renting for $100 per month.

The recommendations of the commission are of a suggestive character, as it has no authority should the agents refuse the reductions. Similar action was taken in four cases Monday.

Cold Season Due If Winter Maintains Average Here

Weather Bureau Heads Predict Pendulum to Swing Back.

For more than a decade Old Man Winter has been going around his course in several strokes above par, and those who remember the big snows are wondering if it isn't time for him to hit his stride again.

Par in this region is 35 in temperature degrees. But since 1920 not once has the score been noticeably below that mark.

The Weather Bureau says no accurate prediction can be made, but it's about time for a real muffler-and-gloves season. It is fairly certain that after periods of mild winters cold weather can be expected to bring the average temperature back to normal, according to R. H. Weightman, chief of the Washington forecast district.

"Maybe the pendulum will swing back in one severe winter," he said, "or the return to normal may last over several years."

Many youngsters are looking to the 1933-34 season to bring them their first taste of the winters their parents talk about. The winter of 1931-32 was the mildest of the decade, with an average of 8 degrees above normal. Last year the thermometer registered less than 5 degrees over the average.

W. C. T. U. School Test Winner Is Announced

Mrs. Ethel Thompson Heads Ashton Aid Club

Mrs. Ethal Thompson was elected president of the Ashton, Md., Ladies Aid and Missionary Society. Others elected were, Mrs. Florence Wetherald, vice president; Mrs. C. Lethbridge, secretary; Mrs. Katherine Dailey, treasurer.

Silver Spring Lions Support Blue Eagle

Enforcement of penalties under the NRA when producers, consumers and retailers fail to cooperate was urged in a resolution adopted by the Silver Spring Lions Club last night at the Montgomery Country Club. The resolution was drawn by Dr. James J. Hanan and Beryl English, past presidents of the club.

It affirmed support of the NRA by the club and lauded its introduction of a living wage and abolition of "industrial oligarchy."

J. H. Mitchell, assistant director, described the work of the reclamation department in constructing dams and distributing water to arid regions. Plans were discussed for ladies' night September 26 at the Montgomery Country Club. Beryl English is chairman.

Gaithersburg Legion Elects Orlando Young

Orlando Young has been elected commander of the Barber-Briggs Post, American Legion, of Gaithersburg. Others elected were Bradley Woodfield, first vice-commander; E. H. FORD LEADS in WASHINGTON

FORD led all other cars in August by 19.6%. Ford led all other cars in July, too! The margin of leadership is daily increasing. What does it mean? It means Washington is buying more carefully, more wisely . . . It means Washington knows its motor cars . . . It means something to every one who is thinking of buying a new car.

Wallace Ready To Sign New Tobacco Tax

(United Press.)

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace expects to sign decrees today fixing processing taxes on six major grades of tobacco to repay growers for their promises to reduce crops by 30 per cent.

The taxes, to be levied under the program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, will be designed to bring tobacco "up to parity levels on all grades except cigar leaf." The latter will carry an arbitrary tax.

Warehouses to Open.

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 13 (Spl.).—Petersburg's tobacco warehouses expect to open September 26 for sale of bright tobacco and will remain open until a few weeks before Christmas.

Buyers from domestic and foreign tobacco companies are expected. R. M. Callis and Wilson Roper will operate the Watson Warehouse and with them will be associated J. P. Gilliam, George Butterworth and F. P. Clay. L. C. Pruitt and V. W. Gates will operate the Virginia Warehouse.

42 Agree to Cut.

Danville, Va., Sept. 13 (AP).—Eighty workers in Pittsylvania County today were calling on tobacco growers asking them to sign the Government's agreement to reduce the 1934-35 tobacco crop to Government requests, and explaining that in return they are to share in the benefits to be derived from the processing tax on manufactured tobacco which becomes effective October 1. They reported 42 signatures.

Growers Pledge Cut.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 13 (AP).—North Carolina State College authorities announced today 14,850 contracts, pledging reduction covering 161,168 acres planted to tobacco this year, had been signed by farmers.

Gov. Ehringhaus indicated he would call for a reopening of Eastern North Carolina tobacco warehouses Monday or Tuesday.

Price of Cotton Jumps.

New Orleans, Sept. 13 (AP).—Encouraged by continued reports of possible inflationary measures, cotton-market prices here today jumped upward for net gains of $2 to $2.45 a bale. Sympathy with higher stocks and grains also was reflected in the rise.

Park District Seeks School

Demand Made for Action On Site Previously Contemplated.

Declaring that American University Park is the only community in Washington without an elementary school, citizens of that area, meeting last night, voiced their demands for immediate action on the subject by the Board of Education.

Association members said a proposed site was surveyed by the Board several years ago, but since abandoned. Indications of recent action by the board concerning the school project brought criticism for their failure to inform citizens of that section as to the progress and location of the school.

The University Park area contains over 200 acres of land and houses 270 families. The necessity of the school is indicated in that an increase of over 70 families have been affected in the past year. A unanimous resolution was adopted demanding an explanation from the Board of Education.

The association also asked the improvement of Upton street west of Massachusetts avenue, and traffic protection for school children at Fessenden street and Wisconsin avenue.

Bank Robbers Get $46,000 in Raid

Wisconsin Band Is Linked With Second Holdup.

Amery, Wis., Sept. 13 (AP).—A masked quartet today held up an assistant cashier of the Union State Bank and fled with $46,000 in cash and negotiable securities.

They were believed by Melvin Passolt, chief of the Minnesota Crime Bureau, to be the same band who robbed a railway express agency in St. Paul Monday.

The raiders hid in the bank last night and overpowered two employes this morning.

Boston Orchestra Will Appear Here

Boston, Sept. 13 (AP).—For the first time in more than 10 years, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Serge Koussevitsky, will give a series of concerts in Washington and Baltimore this season. The schedule was extended today to include a visit to the Century of Progress Exposition.

The Western tour also will include Buffalo, Ann Arbor, Dayton, Columbus, Pittsburgh and Schenectady.

Koussevitsky will arrive in New York from Europe September 20. The season in Boston opens October 6.

Gadget Controversy May Halt Work on Building

This metal inclosure which shields air-conditioning units in the new Labor-Interstate Commerce Commission Building is the bone of contention which caused all carpenters on the project to strike and threatens to shut down all operations tomorrow, throwing more than 1,000 men out of work. Some of the equipment has been installed by steel workers and the carpenters protest they should have the job. Labor Department efforts yesterday to settle the controversy were fruitless. F. F. Mullen, watchman, is examining one of the boxes, which are placed below the window sills.

African Chief Who Flogged British Subject Faces Trial

Palapye, Buchuanaland, Africa, Sept. 13 (AP).—The future of Tshekedi, the young chief of the Bamangwato Tribe, rested tonight in the hands of a special British commission after that body completed an investigation into the flogging by natives of Phineas Mackintosh, a British subject.

The court decided that Mackintosh, who admitted living with a native woman, should be banned henceforth from any of the native reserves.

The flogging was the sentence of a native court, presided over by Tshekedi, who was educated in England.

The commission now must take up the case of the young chief, who temporarily was deposed on the charge that he had violated the laws of the protectorate, which forbid the trial of a European by a native court under any circumstances.

The inquiry was made despite the admission of Mackintosh that he appeared voluntarily in Tshekedi's court on a charge of assault and his declaration that he did not want to take action.

It was an example of British methods in upholding England's rule over wild, savage regions of the empire.

Young Sees Need For NRA Duress

Coercion Required for Disobedient, He Says.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—The NRA, said Owen D. Young tonight, "must coerce those who will not play fair."

The industrialist, in an address urging "doubters to throw away your doubts and fears," declared the regression of business as "not a failure of men so much as it was of system."

"There are always some people," Young said, "who will not honestly and whole-heartedly work in accord with the rules."

"That is the reason," he added, "why the Government must come to our aid."

Prices and Profiteers.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration alleges that certain textile manufacturers have attributed price increases to the cotton processing tax "far beyond the actual amount of the tax paid" on goods offered for sale. The consumers' counsel of the A. A. A. says that misrepresentation of this sort is forbidden and that complaints of "clear violations" will be filed with the Department of Justice.

Since textile mills have to pay a tax of 4.2 cents per pound on the cotton bought for processing—that is, spinning or manufacturing—increases in their production costs under the general recovery program are due to a combination of this special tax and the higher wage and overhead costs entailed by the cotton textile code. It would, no doubt, be comparatively easy to detect cases of gross misrepresentation regarding additions to cost due to payment of processing taxes. But by no means is it a simple matter to determine the direct and indirect effects of such taxes upon the retail selling prices of processed goods.

The consumers' counsel of the A. A. A. estimates that less than 6 per cent is added to the retail selling price of a pair of overalls by the cotton processing tax on the basis of the average price computed for the end of August. It should be noted, however, that the average retail price does not represent the actual prices at which manufacturers are selling overalls of all descriptions from day to day. Furthermore, allowance has to be made for the fact that some overalls contain more cotton than others.

Then, too, certain indirect effects of special taxes are difficult to appraise. For example, mills forced to pay processing taxes on raw materials naturally are reluctant and often unable to accumulate stocks of goods in advance of orders. The result is likely to be a decline in current output that in itself has a price-raising tendency.

Apart from special considerations affecting the cotton textile industry, however, the administration is confronted by certain fundamental price problems of far greater importance to the consuming public. These general problems are the outgrowth of the new system of industrial control which permits competing concerns to control output by agreement and to eliminate unfair practices. They would not be touched, much less be solved, by threats directed at alleged profiteers.

The socially significant questions of price control are those that concern all of the individual units of organized industries. For instance, large numbers of firms have been suffering from cut-throat competition in the form of sales below cost or below prices that yield profits for efficient concerns. Many industrialists whose business has been demoralized by this kind of destructive price undercutting welcomed passage of the recovery act as a means by which to adjust prices to profitable levels. Even if labor costs and other expenses remained unchanged, industries in this class would feel justified in advancing prices under their fair trade codes.

Of course, it is extremely difficult to draw the line between reasonable price increases and profiteering. Since no two competitors have the same production costs, prices that yield profits to some would bring bankruptcy to others. Consequently, when competitors agree that sales below production costs shall not be tolerated, adequate protection for the consumer requires that a reasonable standard of costs applying to concerns of at least average efficiency shall prevail. Otherwise, the costs of the least efficient producers may become the rod by which to measure what consumers will have to pay.

As the administration is pledged to bring about increases in the prices of manufactured goods as well as farm products, the question is not whether prices ought to rise, but how far they can rise without becoming extortionate.

Spain and Catalonia.

The cabinet crisis in Spain has been resolved by the formal approval by President Zamora of the new premier's selection of a republican coalition group. Premier Alejandro Lerroux chose his associates from the conservative Radical Republicans and the independent Radical Socialists, ignoring the Socialist minority. Political excitement reached such a high pitch pending the formation of a new government that a recess of the Cortes until next month is being advocated to permit party feeling to subside.

With the settlement of the cabinet issue attention reverts to the unprecedented action of the Generalidad of Barcelona in barring labor immigration from the rest of Spain. Though Catalonia has won autonomy, the province is still under Spanish sovereignty, and this first step in creating a frontier barrier is a shock comparable to the resentment which would be caused by an American State excluding workers from the rest of the Union. The decree stipulates that industries of the region shall employ only persons who have lived in Catalonia for two years.

Barcelona, being the industrial center of Spain, was attracting the unemployed from all parts of the country. The exclusion order was deemed to be necessary because agents had established an organized traffic, importing laborers and promising work on payment of a fee, when no openings were available. Catalan industrialists are anxious that the rest of Spain should understand the exclusion act to be an emergency measure, as it would be disastrous for them if adjoining provinces should retaliate by boycotts on their products.

Subsidizing Wheat Exports.

Plans for exportation of approximately 30,000,000 bushels of wheat from the Pacific northwest have been announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Since wheat is selling for 15 to 20 cents per bushel more in the United States than in the world market, the A. A. A. has worked out a plan "for reimbursing exporters for the difference between the American domestic price paid to producers of wheat and the lower world price."

The wheat-exporting plan is undertaken in accordance with the agricultural adjustment act, which permits the use of Government funds for the expansion of agricultural markets. It is designed to relieve the domestic wheat market, especially in the Northwest, and thereby to aid in raising prices in this country. According to an official statement from the A. A. A. the wheat surplus in the Northwest has become particularly burdensome and is having a depressing effect upon the entire American market for this staple.

Much emphasis is laid upon the fact that this is an emergency move and should not be considered as the "adoption of any definite form or policy" by the Secretary of Agriculture. There is no intention of selling this surplus American wheat at less than the world price.

The sale of foreign goods or produce in the United States at prices lower than those prevailing in the country of their origin is penalized under the American tariff law. Such goods may be excluded from the American market on the ground that their sale here constitutes unfair competition. This is probably one reason why the A. A. A. emphasizes the emergency nature of its present undertaking. A permanent policy of dumping wheat on the world market with the aid of Government funds undoubtedly would result in retaliation on the part of other governments.

The A. A. A. seems to be relying upon acreage reduction for permanent relief from the wheat surplus. If the present carryover could be reduced to a reasonable volume there would be less difficulty in maintaining the American price above the world level. But the Government can not be expected to continue making up the difference between domestic and foreign wheat prices to save the growers from losses.

Free Ballooning.

The hardships of the four pilots of the American and Polish balloons which ended their flights in the Canadian wilds serve to emphasize once more the futility of contests of this character.

The free balloon has its legitimate uses for scientific research in the upper atmosphere and the stratosphere, and the captive balloon is valuable for observation both on land and sea in warfare. But races to see which gas bag, perchance, will drift the greatest distance from the starting point have little to recommend them, either as tests of skill or as feats which add to scientific knowledge.

From the earliest hot air and hydrogen balloons which were constructed in France 150 years ago, little improvement has been made in the globular type of bag used in racing. It was in 1782 that the Montgolfier brothers, in the little French town of Annonay, near Lyons, inflated the first balloon with hot air from burning straw. They thought it was the smoke which lifted the balloon. The next year hydrogen gas was used and the first human being risked an ascent. Virtually all the features of the modern balloon—the top valve, the net covering and the car suspended from a hoop—were designed in those early years.

By contrast, the captive observation, or kite balloon, has undergone great transformation. The tendency of the round bag to spin round and to drift in a wind, rather than rise, led to the development of the reconnoitering type known as the sausage balloon. By means of small sails and an air-inflated bag at the rear, which acts as a rudder, these captive aerostats are stabilized. Towed by vessels at sea, or rising behind the battle lines, their occupants are able to make distant observations and give firing directions against points that are not visible from the ground or from the deck of a vessel.

Los Angeles' Crime Weapon.

Los Angeles has adopted a new weapon against criminals as a result of a recent outbreak of lawlessness. The supervisors of Los Angeles County passed an ordinance requiring all persons convicted of a felony during the last ten years to register at the sheriff's office within forty-eight hours. Efforts are being made to secure the enactment of a similar ordinance by the Los Angeles city council and by all the other municipalities in the county.

Authorities at Los Angeles are confronted by the old problem of dealing with habitual criminals who are clever in evading the law. Most other large cities, notably Chicago, have been baffled by the same problem for years. Efforts have been made to drive out this sort of criminal under vagrancy laws, but in most instances this weapon has been inadequate. Criminals known to the police and the public have continued to operate by devious means, with authorities powerless to convict them of any specific crime.

The experiment in Los Angeles is undoubtedly designed to deal with this situation. Its objective is to rid Los Angeles County of undesirables or to put them under surveillance of the law enforcement authorities. Individuals convicted of a felony are required to provide the sheriff with information regarding their place of residence and their means of support. Changes of address must be promptly reported. Failure to comply with the ordinance makes former convicts liable to a fine of $500 and six months in jail.

It remains to be seen how effective this ordinance will be. It may cause a great deal of resentment among individuals once convicted of crime who are now living honorable lives. Yet they need not be annoyed if they have definitely abandoned criminal activities. Under this ordinance the professional racketeer may find it extremely difficult to operate without revealing the true nature of his business or making himself liable to repeated arrest for failure to register.

At any rate, it is encouraging to find cities and counties striving for more effective means of fighting organized crime.

Tenants to Lose Work.

The Texas Weekly calls attention to a condition that will arise from the exclusion of 15,000,000 acres from cotton production, as provided in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program. The owners of these lands are to be paid a rental of $3 to $11 an acre, depending upon the average production over a five-year period. But the benefits will go to owners only, and the Weekly estimates that large numbers of tenants will be deprived of a livelihood.

Tenants hold an equity in the cotton that is plowed under this year, and therefore share in the Federal bonus. But when the acreage is eliminated from cotton production next year these tenants will be without means of support. In Texas about 78 per cent of them are white and 22 per cent colored.

Federal authorities are said to have estimated that 25,000,000 acres will produce all the cotton that can be profitably sold. Apparently it is proposed that the cotton area shall be held down to this level. But experience has demonstrated that it is impossible to determine in advance what a given area will yield. The amount of acreage is only one factor, and not the controlling one, in the annual cotton crop. Weather conditions, the degree of boll weevil infestation, and the extent to which fertilizers are used all have an important bearing on the final output.

If the Government intends to pay a handsome rental on all land excluded from production, it is reasoned that cotton landowners will cooperate in holding down the acreage in the hope of obtaining larger profits. The rental to be paid will average somewhat better than the equivalent of one-fourth of the cotton that could be raised on the land at 10 cents a pound. This is a strong inducement to landowners to reduce their cotton planting. But the operation will fall hardest upon tenants, who are not provided for under the plan. The Texas Weekly therefore concludes that "there is going to be plenty of use for the $20,000,000 bond issue that was authorized at the recent election for relief."

Jersey City and Newark are bidding for Wall street. Why not open the competition to the whole country, with a special discount to the corn belt?

The Declining Birth Rate.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Statisticians have been aware for some years that the decline in America's birth rate meant that the population in time would become stationary. This date was tentatively set at somewhere between 1950 and 1960, with a figure of about 150,000,000 inhabitants. New figures just issued by the Federal division of vital statistics show the birth rate decline has recently been accelerated, making it necessary to revise all estimates.

In 1915 the rate was 25.1 births per 1,000 of population. By 1922 it had fallen to 22.3, and by 1930 to 18.9. In 1932, the new figures show, it descended to 17.3, for the lowest rate on record. It is significant to note that the birth rate in the cities fell from 17.5 to 16.3 in the last year, while in the rural districts it fell only from 18.5 to 18.3. The general trend and the reduced number of marriages last year (only 7.87 per 1,000 population, the smallest figure on record) indicate the rate will be still lower in 1933. While the birth rate has fallen about 25 per cent in ten years, the death rate has remained about the same, around 12 per 1,000. So the time of stationary population now is forecast as before 1950, and at a somewhat lower total than had been predicted.

These facts are of more than statistical interest; they have an important bearing on all phases of the country's social and economic welfare. With a stable population the expansion of industry, agriculture, educational facilities, building and real estate development would of necessity be retarded. Return of better times would probably accelerate the birth rate, but the decline has been in progress since long before the depression began.

The effects need not be altogether adverse, however. With a decreasing number of youthful persons, the labor surplus would gradually be absorbed, and the normal trend would be to a higher wage scale. With a population definitely stable advance planning for business would be simplified. Prof. J. J. Spengler, of Ohio State University, has written of one possible phase: "A benediction upon quality will replace the current doxology of quantity, with respect to both man and the things he consumes, be they adult education, furniture or movies."

America is coming of age, both spiritually and physically. The pioneer stage of expansion is virtually over, and our society must adjust itself to the new conditions that are swiftly advancing.

"What do you think of the trouble in Cuba?"

"I think it was a good move putting that new man, Dr. Junta, in as president. It shows the people realize the country is pretty sick. What caused the revolution, anyhow?"

"The old president, Huey Machado, got beat up in a washroom or something. I forget the details, but the people threw him out."

"I see the United States sent a lot of warships to Havana, including the Nourmahal and the De Cespedes."

"Yeah. It looks pretty bad for the Cubans if they refuse our request to give Insull back to America for trial."

"Just the same, I think Hull should have signed the code with the rest of those automobile men."

"Why does he want O'Ryan stock in Germany? The O'Ryans are Irish."

CHINESE ON BICYCLES.

Chinese peasants are now commencing to use bicycles in going to and from their fields, writes T. B. Wilson, of Philadelphia. Their bright little nickel bells ring merrily in warning to pedestrians and pushers of wheelbarrows. Tiny donkeys, ridden by long-gowned men who ride their hindquarters, shy and balk in the sunken roads that have been worn far below the surface of the ground by centuries of passers-by.

There are now 10,000 licensed bicycles in Shantung Province alone. Most of them are of German, Japanese and British make.

The Kaisers Would Issue No Ultimatums If They Were Given Another Chance.

By Robert Quillen.

THIS is addressed to those commonly called the "big men" of the country.

As a group you dominate and control the life of the Nation. Directly or indirectly, you are responsible for the policies that determine the weal or woe of the people.

And now, whether you realize it or not, you are called upon to make a decision that may change the destiny of the Nation.

When a king, having lost his throne, reviews the events that led to his downfall, the concessions demanded by his former subjects seem strangely unimportant.

They seemed important at the time. The demands enraged him. Secure and arrogant in his power, he cried: "The impudent rascals need discipline! The idea of trying to tell me how to run this country! I'll show them who is boss."

But all values are relative, and now he has a new standard of measurement. The things he was asked to give seem trivial compared with giving up his throne.

And now he says to his soul: "Why didn't they tell me how they felt? I didn't realize how desperate they were. Why, I'll gladly grant everything they asked, and more, if they will restore me to the throne."

But there is no restoration—no going back.

"The moving finger writes, and having writ
Moves on; nor all your piety or wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

For good or ill, America has begun a new scheme of things. The people are thinking in new terms. They have a new conception of right and justice.

They have no definite policy or goal, and they have no clear understanding of what is happening. They are still meek—still content, for the moment, to wait and see what tomorrow will bring.

But they have changed. They are expecting a real new deal. They will not patiently endure another winter like the last.

It is up to you. If you will, you can insure them against want—without charity. You can make recovery prompt and certain.

It will cost you something. The means required may offend or enrage you. You may think you are asked to do too much.

But it will seem a small price to pay for security when it's too late.

The purse left in a burning building seems a treasure worth any risk; but how worthless it seems when the falling timbers have trapped you in the fire!

A Flying Congressman.

Brooklyn Eagle.

Japan hails with enthusiasm as an aviator, at least an aviation passenger, George Holden Tinkham, M. C., of the Eleventh Massachusetts District, protagonist of antilynching legislation, a Mayflower descendant in whom is no guile, a Harvard man of the class of 1894. Mr. Tinkham has an audience with Premier Saito at Tokyo. He is to have a conference with Count Uchida, minister of foreign affairs, and all sorts of military facilities for his flying will be granted by the Nippon government.

The air traveler can get a commercial plane from Tokyo to Seoul and thence to Shingishu, on the Yalu River. There a Jap army plane will pick him up and take him to Harbin and Changchun. Thence another army plane will convey him across Jehol to the Great Wall. Then he will go by motor car to Peiping and by plane to Saigon for a tiger hunt in French Indo-China. After that there will be another tiger hunt in India and a trip home by way of Paris, all of which program is to be carried out before New Year's sees Mr. Tinkham in his loved Back Bay.

Employment Gains.

New York Times.

Gain in employment since recovery began was recently estimated at 2,000,000 jobs for the whole country by William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and members of the NRA administration. It was not so large an increase as one had been led to expect from various indexes published at Washington and Albany. Several weeks before Mr. Green's estimate Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported that the gain in industrial occupation alone accounted for 1,100,000 new jobs. And industry comprises not much more than one-third of the gainfully occupied, after excluding agriculture.

Carlisle Bargeron

Bargeron.

IT IS ALL very well for Madame Perkins, to whom the women refer proudly as a doer, to say that a school problem is presented by the thousands of children taken from employment by the nonchild labor provision of the codes. Undoubtedly it is a problem.

But how about the problem caused by the teachers quitting their jobs to come to Washington to take over the government? It is a phase of our own ABC movement that we have not considered, one that the President has not considered, because certainly no one is more keenly alive to the necessity of training the Nation's youth than he. It is a problem, in fact, that has been entirely overlooked by all, save, perhaps, the professors themselves, and you wouldn't expect them, under the circumstances, to bring it up.

I don't know the extent of this disaster to our schools, of course. But it must be tremendous. Let's see, there must be classrooms darkened by the absence of Profs. Moley, Tugwell, Warren, Rogers and Berle, at least. And, of course, this is just the beginning. Goodness only knows how many of the teachers are here. From the output of ideas one would seem to be fair in reckoning the number at a million, though manifestly that is not true, as there are not that many people in our town, as a whole.

But everyone will agree that the professors are here in multiple. They are stuck, many of them, around in nooks and crannies, yet to come to light. One sometimes gets the impression that what Mr. Roosevelt means when he says he will turn up a new card in the "new deal" is that he will turn up another professor. We are turning under the little pigs and the corn and the wheat, but we are turning up the professors; there's no mistaking that.

There is no national planning of them at all. Without rhyme or reason they bob up here with an idea or ideas.

Prof. Moley, of course, was not with us long. He has gone on, but not back to the classrooms. The new deal has come for the professor. He has, or is by way of getting his share of the redistribution of wealth.

• • • •

But one can understand what this exodus of the teachers from the school to the revolution means to the classrooms which they left. Indeed, numerous stories have come to me in the past few days of the poignant, tragic scenes at the classrooms over the country as the schools opened for the 1933-34 term. They are all the more touching because they involve the innocents of our land, the little tots and the youngsters, who can't be expected to know of the revolution, of its importance, and what it entails.

The disappointment that came to them!

Now all during the summer these youngsters have just been itching for school to reopen. You know how youngsters are, how they are just crazy about school, how they hate for vacation time to roll around.

You can imagine the expression on their childish faces then when they go up to their classroom and find a notice reading:

"Closed on account of the teacher having gone down to Washington to join the ABC."

• • • •

I am not blaming the professors, not saying that they should withdraw from such a worthy movement and return to their instruction. It is not that at all.

Rather than criticize them, in fact, anyone with knowledge of the professors' plight heretofore appreciates their restlessness and the sudden consciousness that has come to them. I suppose there is no class of our people that has been so underpaid. In our mad rush for riches, for the material things of life, we had utterly overlooked them. Year after year they sent us out into the world fully equipped to grapple with the competitive marts of trade, and as often we forgot them.

• • • •

No such situation as that can long obtain among a civilized folk, and the professors are that. Looking back after their revolt, after their taking over the reins of government in the greatest bloodless revolution a nation ever had, one realizes that these teachers have been brooding over the injustice of things. They have instructed thousands of men how to run the government and, lo, what happens when these instructed men get to running it? They pass the professors entirely by.

Would you expect the professors always to stand for that? Of course, you would not. But it is rather hard on the children now wanting to learn.

COUNTERFEIT MONEY.

To prevent its clerks from accepting these and other bogus bills, the Postoffice Department described a method of detecting counterfeits—a method that every shrewd passer of the "queer" already knew, says Time. The method: Divide the serial number on every bill (except a national banknote) by 9. Compare the remainder with the tiny letter in the lower right corner. If the remainder is

1,	the letter should be	A or G
2,	" " "	B or H
3,	" " "	C or I
4,	" " "	D or J
5,	" " "	E or K
0,	" " "	F or L

If the letter is not correct, the note is counterfeit. But even if it is, the bill may still be counterfeit.

Lamson Cited As Husband Discontented

Courthouse, San Jose, Calif., Sept. 13 (AP).—David A. Lamson was pictured by the prosecution in final arguments in his murder trial today as a discontented husband who seized his pretty wife, Allene, by the hair and crushed her skull with an iron pipe.

John P. Fitzgerald, deputy district attorney, began summing up for the State. Both sides had swiftly completed rebuttal testimony, and Judge R. R. Syer had decided not to send the jury to inspect the Stanford University campus cottage where Mrs. Lamson's unclothed body was found in the bathtub last Memorial Day.

Having predicated its case on the theory that Mrs. Lamson, campus Y. W. C. A. secretary, could have been injured fatally by falling against an enamel washstand, the defense confined its surrebuttal to brief examination of Frank Hapgood, undertaker, and Dr. Margaret Lamson and Mrs. Willis Thoits, sisters of the accused Stanford Press executive.

Fitzgerald offered domestic discord as the motive for the alleged slaying, and pointed to testimony that Lamson had been friendly with Mrs. Sara Kelley, a Sacramento divorcee.

The deputy district attorney dwelt on prosecution testimony that a spot of blood had been found inside the sleeve of Lamson's coat, which had been hanging in the bathroom; that Lamson had visited Mrs. Kelley in Sacramento, and that they had been seen "intoxicated in each other's presence."

Ottley Captor Gets 21 Years

Abductor of Atlanta Bank President Found Guilty on Three Counts.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 13 (AP).—William Delinski, former sailor and stationery salesman, tonight was found guilty of kidnaping John K. Ottley, president of the First National Bank, for ransom and for robbery and carrying concealed weapons. He was given 21 to 28 years in prison.

Delinski was tried on all three charges. One of the indictments contained two counts, one charging carrying concealed weapons and carrying a pistol without a license.

He was the first man convicted under a new law passed at the last session of the State Legislature increasing the maximum penalty of 4 to 6 years to 4 to 20 years, if the kidnaping was for ransom.

The jury deliberated 2 hours and 25 minutes. Judge John D. Humphries passed sentence.

One Tabernacle Pastor Fights Oppositionists.

Jonesboro, Ark., Sept. 13 (AP).—The Rev. Dale S. Crowley and John Nelson, a member of the Rev. Members of the opposing factions have engaged for several weeks in a turbulent contest over whether Crowley or Jeffers, a militant evangelist, is pastor of the tabernacle.

The fight occurred in front of the city hall just after Crowley had appeared as a witness against Walter Montague, another Jefferite, in his municipal court trial on a charge of disturbing the peace and using abusive language.

Finance Tax Fight Starts

Brokers and Bankers Act to Test New York Emergency Levy.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Brokers and bankers took the first definite steps today toward a court attack on the city's emergency tax program, under which levies would be placed on their profits and investments.

A group of stock exchange firms, it was learned, called a meeting tomorrow at which the bill imposing a 5 per cent tax on their gross profits will be studied with a view to a legal test.

Henry Bruere, savings banker, announced his associates would meet soon to consider court action against the city's right to levy a one-fourth of 1 per cent tax on the investments of savings banks and insurance companies.

Both groups would base their legal fight on the constitutionality of the measures, approved yesterday by the board of estimate.

Dime Device Will Patch Up "Everything"

Shopper Also Finds a Handy Coffee Server, Colonial Candlesticks.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

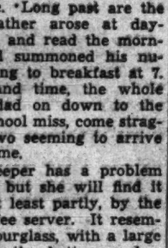
It's not unusual to hear that by saving your dimes you can in no time accumulate $10, but what will you think when we tell you that by spending a dime you can save $10? It's this way: A G street store is selling some little gadgets especially designed to mend anything from hot water bottles to wash boilers. They come in a box with directions inclosed, so there's no worrying over the simple process of attaching them. Now take invoice around the house. Get out some of those leaky pots and pans, be they granite, aluminum, copper, tin or iron, and tackle them with some of these money-saving little menders.

Large families have a way of being particular nuisances around breakfast time. Long past are the days when father arose at daybreak, dressed and read the morning paper and summoned his numerous offspring to breakfast at 7. In this day and time, the whole family from dad on down to the sleepy-eyed school miss, come straggling in, no two seeming to arrive at the same time.

The housekeeper has a problem on her hands, but she will find it can be met, at least partly, by the large new coffee server. It resembles the old hourglass, with a large glass globe at the bottom and a rounded metal container at the top. In seven minutes you can make seven cups, and keep them warm any length of time. With this new device you can serve the coffee in a distinctive and convenient fashion. On sale in a G street store.

Modernistic furniture being one of the themes of the day, don't miss seeing the attractive seven-piece dinette set on display in a downtown furniture store. It combines futuristic design with Dutch stability, solid oak composition with maple finish, square outlines with bowlegs. Doesn't that sound interesting? The color scheme is sea green, touched here and there with black and silver. The table has the tuck-in leaves at either end that can be used to enlarge it when you desire. Then there's a spacious cabinet, small sideboard and four chairs. It would prove an attractive buy for $98.

Two-bits you never saw a crow like this one. It's made of shiny black glass. And it plays a tune. You'd think that would be enough for any crow to to do, but not this one. It has that sly look in its eye that seems to say: "I may look pretty staid, but there's a lot of life in me yet." And if you doubt it, unscrew the knob on the back of its neck and take a whiff. It's a bird of a bottle, sure enough.



After we've paid for our evening dress, our slippers, earrings and a bracelet, there's still the evening bag to be considered, and precious little we have left to consider it on. However, we're bargain hunters, so we know what to do. We'll hunt up a closing-out sale and see what we can find.

Right here—why not this one? A downtown department store is selling off its summer stock, which includes a number of party bags. These small bugle-bead bags used to be a lot more than the dollar they are now. Blue, pink, pearl and black—which will you have? What about these seed-pearl bags trimmed in crystal beads—nice? Or these metal-cloth novelty bags? You know metal cloth is in style this season. At any rate, here's a wide variety to choose from.

Many amateur artists find real pleasure in doing little sketches and water colors at home. An F street store is catering to them with some new and unusual crayon pencils. You draw your picture with these and then go over the lines with a wet brush. The colors spread over the paper, and blend in artistically. You've no idea what unusual and striking effect you can gain from the use of these until you've given them a try. Each box holds 12 colors and sells for $1.

There's a new note in garters this season and it's B flat. The bulky lumps so often resulting from ordinary rolled hose need be no more. The sheath-like silhouettes of the fall frocks demand evenness of line, a thing often impossible with garter belts or round garters. These new ones lie perfectly flat around your thighs and hold your hose neatly and firmly, without interfering with your freedom of movement. You're sure to like them.

The style of our frock often depends on the fit of our undergarments. The slip naturally plays a most important part. If it wrinkles and bulges, the lines of our dress are liable to be terribly distorted. A downtown store is showing some silk crepe slips in tea rose, or white, with the brassiere tops fagoted on. Here's a way to buy two garments in one and feel confident that no unsightly bumps are going to detract from our new frocks.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of the Woman's Department of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Winter Frock Built Around The Neckline

Designers have concentrated frock interest about the throat and bust.

High necklines, recalling the boned collars of the gay nineties, small vee necklines edged with white frills like grandmother wore, round, flat Chinese necklines, small collars, caught close around the throat with an old-fashioned gold brooch or a gold bar, scarfs wrapped about the neck and thrust through a slit in the bodice—all these variations appear in the neckline cuts, designed to frame the face like a flower.

The rest of the frock molds downward from the neckline, built on a slender line curving softly around the bust and hips. Skirts remain slender, with a hemline 8 to 13 inches from the ground. Waistlines are natural or princess.

Wools in deep tones of gray, henna brown, wine, deep green, beige and deep blue make many morning frocks. A little velvet collar, or a twist of fur at the high neckline, adds 1934 chic to a number of them.

Gleaming satin, Lyons and Paysan velvet, deeply crinkled crepe and faille make frocks for more formal occasions. Many of the darker toned frocks are given a touch of contrasting color at the neckline or in the lining of a crushed girdle. Others are given a flash of brilliance by bright buttons, gold embroidery, or an antique brooch clamped at the neckline.

What Today Means

"VIRGO"

If September 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10 a. m., from 1 to 1:30 p. m. and from 4:50 to 5:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 to 11:45 a. m., from 3 to 3:40 p. m. and from 6 to 8 p. m.

Influences operating on this date, will probably make you quick to see and appreciate the other person's point of view; this will prove invaluable to you in your business and personal dealings. Do not let yourself be misled by the visionary plans of any one who may come to see you. In your relations with your family, you will have to be firm, intent on leading rather than willing to be led.

The child born on September 14, will probably be slow in getting wise to the ways of the world; he will be unsuspecting and easily taken in. A loving nature will find it difficult to see evil in others. Will probably be the butt of many pranks from his playmates at school. A good sport and an uncomplaining little one.

If September 14 is the date of your birth, it is probable that you will not find yourself classed among the leaders in the business or professional group in your community; but you will be among those who have a great deal of influence though in a less generally known manner. You might be likened to the man behind the gun; you will have much power, for others will come to you for advice and guidance on matters of extreme importance. By keeping out of the general swirl of things, you will be able to keep in with all factions, amass an abundance of information, and then render impartial judgment. You are generally admired as a man who keeps his own counsel; you are slow to give advice, and never unless it is solicited.

Born on September 14, you speak plainly and without ever sugar-coating your words; you seldom however, offend, for you have a disarming way and you speak and act with sincerity. You dislike publicity of any kind. You are a truly humble person. In the company of your intimate friends, you are quite a gay person; you stop all thought of business and its problems when you close the office door at night, and from then on you thoroughly enjoy yourself. You like a good story, even though it be a bit risque and you are an able raconteur yourself. You spend a great deal of your time with your family, and wish you could spend more. Much of your time is spent out of doors where you can get good exercise; golf and tennis, swimming also, appeals to you.

Mrs. Thomson Seeks Data On Benjamin

Former Washington Debutante Would Pay Tribute to Great Jew.

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt is the most popular President within my memory," said Mrs. James M. Thomson, of New Orleans, former Democratic National committeewoman and daughter of the late Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, yesterday at the Hotel Mayflower.

"The President," she continued, "has a remarkable unanimity of opinion behind him, both nonpartisan and non-sectional. It is like the accord given to our war Presidents. Outside of this the most gratifying thing I feel as a Democratic woman is in the number of women recognized for public office by this administration.

"I have an added pleasure because the women selected are of the caliber to justify the faith put in them and also the faith of the old suffrage leaders who fought for this kind of recognition. Of course, it will be remembered, it was the Democratic party that first gave this kind of feminine recognition.

"But the placing of a woman in the Cabinet and in other positions of importance and responsibility is a decided advance over previous action on the part of any of our Presidents."

Made Debut Here.

Mrs. Thomson, who as the popular Genevieve Champ Clark, passed her childhood and made her debut in Washington and was called "the daughter of the House," is in Washington for a time on a literary, not a political, mission.

Mrs. Thomson is busy completing her book on the American Disraeli, Judah Benjamin, Attorney General and Secretary of War of the Confederate States. Mrs. Thomson's brother, United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, has had published recently an autobiography of John Quincy Adams, favorably regarded by the critics.

Mrs. Thomson remarked yesterday that the reason she and her brother had selected historical characters as the subjects of their books was because their father, once a leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, always insisted their reading along these lines.

An Illustrious Jew.

"Judah Benjamin," Mrs. Thomson pointed out, "was one of the most distinguished Jews in the history of the United States. I became interested in him because he was a citizen of Louisiana and was representing that State in the United States Senate at the time the Civil War broke out. By many he was regarded as the brains of the Confederacy. He was one of this country's great lawyers and one of two men who ever refused an appointment to the United States Supreme Court. It was offered to him by President Franklin K. Pierce. John Quincy Adams was the other man who refused this honor.

"Judah Benjamin started out in life with nothing and amassed two fortunes, losing the first one in the great flood of 1845 and the other as the result of the Civil War.

Fled to England.

"At the defeat of the Confederacy, Benjamin escaped to England. Although a distinguished member of the American bar, at the age of 55 he went as a law student in the Inner Temple. Then he began to practice with John Siddell and rose to be queen's counsel and practiced law in England for some 20 years before his death. He would have been placed on the English bench except for the fact that it was feared that, on account of his having been a former Confederate, it might offend this Government, so soon after the close of the war."

Judah Benjamin's reluctance to leave biographical matter for future biographers was so great he destroyed most of his correspondence, with the boast that there would not be 20 of his letters left after his death. Yale University, of which he was a graduate, is now making an effort to get together a great collection of data about this "senator of two republics."

Born on Island.

"Judah Benjamin was born on the Island of St. Thomas," continued Mrs. Thomson, "while his parents were en route from England to the United States. Fifty-five years later the English took the point of view that, despite Benjamin's long residence in the United States and his high positions in two governments there, that, born on English soil, he was still an Englishman. They admitted him to the English bar without the customary period of probation required of foreign applicants."

In Paris several years ago Mrs. Thomson spent days searching for Benjamin's grave and finally located it in the Pere la Chaise Cemetery, where he is buried with 12 other persons, without his name being on the gravestone. He left no lineal descendants. He died a Frenchman, having lived there the last days of his life.

"I have been working on my Judah Benjamin biography for about three years," concluded Mrs. Thomson, "and I want to exhaust all possible resources of material about him before its publication. I love this self-imposed task and I shall stick to it as a tribute to the man I regard as one of the greatest of American Jews."

Welfare Worker

MISS ELIZABETH NORCUTT, District Supervisor with the Associated Charities in Washington, who finds one of the most serious social aspects of the depression is the development of personality problems among children.

Hard Times Leave Scars On Children

Specter of Fear Warps Their Character, Charities Worker Reveals.

Personality difficulties in children, resulting from fear born of unemployment among parents, is one of the most serious problems confronting Washington social agencies, according to Elizabeth Northcutt, supervisor of the Third District, Associated Charities, 1022 Eleventh street northwest.

These problems, which manifest themselves both at home and in school, through such symptoms as socially unacceptable behavior, disability as students, reactions of timidity, seclusiveness, aggressiveness, obstinacy and speech difficulty, are treated for the most part by the Child Guidance Clinic, a project of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, Seventh and P streets northwest.

Parents' Anxiety a Strain.

"Children may be deprived of food and clothing to a large extent, without suffering apparent ill effect," Miss Northcutt said, "but the strain of knowing their parents are anxious is invariably damaging to their personality, sometimes almost irremediably so."

Graduate of Johns Hopkins School of Social Service, where she obtained her master's degree in political economy, Miss Northcutt has been affiliated with the Associated Charities staff since 1928.

She told of a 12-year-old girl in a middle-class family of three children. The family's security was destroyed two years ago when the father lost his job. Soon afterward the child developed stomach trouble and pronounced timidity. She became shy and reluctant to leave her mother's side.

Condition Grows Worse.

Although the father has since found work and financial security has been restored to the home, the child's condition is growing worse.

"She blushes easily," Miss Northcutt related. "She refuses to drink the milk offered her at school. She can not be persuaded to go far from home. The temporary loss of security planted a fear that something might happen to her parents, especially her mother, in her absence."

Sensitive, highly intelligent children are most readily and disastrously affected by upset home conditions, in Miss Northcutt's opinion. Her theory is substantiated by the fact that two other children in the family whose case is cited were able to maintain an approximately normal emotional balance throughout the trying period of the father's unemployment.

Just now, when need is greatest, the Child Guidance Clinic finds itself handicapped in working out personality problems, because of curtailed educational and recreational facilities.

Limited Fund Cuts Work.

Ruth Camblon, chief psychiatric social worker with the clinic, described the situation:

"One must have resources within the community to fall back on, if the child is to be helped. Such resources are made possible by the Community Chest, if it is properly supported. This year educational and civic recreational facilities for the underprivileged child have been largely curtailed because of limited funds."

The clinic makes a psychiatric study of the emotional heredity and environment of the child, looks into material conditions in the home. Sometimes entire responsibility for corrective treatment is assumed by the clinic, but often some responsibility is delegated to a case worker in a social agency, who works with the parents in helping the child back to normalcy.

Effort is made to establish understanding between parent and child and between child and teacher. The youngster is given opportunity for play activity with other children and he is given something constructive to do, in creative art, manual training or special study.

Place to Fit Is Aim.

The social worker in such cases strives to fit the child into his environment and to his association with other children, and to guide the development of his potential talents.

Mrs. Camblon told about a 10-year-old boy, the youngest child in a large family of intelligent children, whose parents are of the Latin race.

"This was one of those cases which could have been definitely and quickly solved if we had had means to send the boy away to camp for the summer—which we could not do, because we hadn't an available scholarship," she said.

"He is a hyperactive boy, difficult to manage either at home or in school. To a psychiatrist, it was obvious the child would benefit by a complete change of environment, away from his parents and brothers and sisters. A good camp would have been the ideal solution. But it was out of the question."

Mrs. Camblon has been with the Child Guidance Clinic since it was established in Washington in 1930. In addition to interviewing parents of problem children, and making a psychiatric study of their difficulty, she allocates responsibility for providing the prescribed cure.

She is a graduate of the University of Illinois and studied at the Smith College School of Social Work, under a Commonwealth fellowship for graduate study, to obtain her master's degree. After working in the Institute for Juvenile Research in Chicago, with the Huntington Foundation at Syracuse, N. Y., and doing family case work with the United Charities of Chicago, she came to Washington to join the staff of the Child Guidance Clinic.

Praises School Official.

Mrs. Camblon paid tribute to Miss Jessie La Salle, head of the research department of the Washington Department of Education, in speaking of the cooperation which exists between the educational system and the social agencies in dealing with problem children.

"No school system in the country more clearly recognizes the psychological needs of the problem child than do the Washington schools, and none afford more intelligent cooperation," declared Mrs. Camblon. "We owe this condition almost entirely to Miss La Salle, who gradually built up this viewpoint over a period of years."

What's in Fashion?

Fall's Shawl-Collar Coats Hold Stage With New Tricks

Directed by Amos Parrish

You can't keep a good fashion down—any more than a good man. And shawl collars on fall and winter coats are good fashions—comfortable and flattering. Which is why they continue to hold the center of the fashion stage season after season.

Always with something new in their bag of tricks . . . like any good showman. But not forgetting the good old standbys which always bring down the house.

The new tricks to it are having one end of the shawl left loose, or, newer still, both ends loose so they can be manipulated in many ways to suit various fancies.

Short Shawls.

Another staple is the short shawl collar of long-haired fur well set back from the face. You've seen hundreds of them flattering the faces above.

This, too, has new tricks. One is the "epaulet extension" . . . ends that turn back over the shoulders to give them the fashionable wide look.

Another . . . which the young person will like . . . is the short shawl with fabric ends to tie in a bow below the chin.

Teatime Collar.

The sketch shows another new trick in shawl collars . . . a jabot shawl with fur border, sometimes called the "teatime shawl." It may be wrapped cozily, as the front figure is wearing it. Or opened in the more formal, luxurious way of the second figure.

Shawl collars of short-haired furs . . . Persian, caracul, mink, squirrel, beaver and so on . . . are much in fashion, too. There's the square notched rever shawl which is a perennial favorite. And another squared shawl without notching, set high on the coat and sometimes accompanied by a fur band on the sleeve.

Another newcomer in the shawl parade is the shawl front and yoke back . . . extra protection if you're sensitive or cold between your shoulder blades.

How to Combine Colors.

The color of your coat sets the pace for your entire wardrobe. And fashion has a set of rules for matching and contrasting hats and dresses and accessories with coats.

These we've incorporated in our new leaflet which charts coat colors and their harmonious dresses and accessories. It tells you at a glance just what to wear with what. The coupon below tells how to receive it.

The Family Marketer

Dinner Falls "Flat" Just Because She Didn't Know Her Market.

Many carefully planned dinners have fallen decidedly flat from the standpoint of taste. The housewife has been at a loss to explain why such a thing happened. She had bought fresh products and they had been prepared well, but the fact remained, the dinner had lacked the savory qualities she had hoped for.

Such an outcome often can be explained by the housewife's lack of knowledge. She has failed to keep tab on the seasonable products in the market, failed to note just when the different vegetables are at their peak. Month in and month out she sees greens, beans, peas, beets, &c., available. She has, perhaps, noticed a variation in price, but she has never inquired the reason why.

Should Know Market.

She should find out which are local products, whether a new crop or old, which are shipped in from faraway States, and whether these are in season or not. With this fund of information she will be able to judge what vegetables are apt to be the best that week.

For instance, string beans. She will see them now, 3 pounds for 19 cents. She might remark to herself: "Too cheap to be much good!" A month from now she will see them, twice or three times as high as they are now and say to herself that they must be good, else how could they sell for such a price?

If she but knew, the beans on the market now are the last crop of the locals. They are at their very best in size, tenderness and flavor. Those coming in later will be shipped from the South and will not compare with those on hand now.

True of Lima Beans, Too.

The same is true of lima beans. Those on the market now are higher than they have been, bringing 39 cents a quart. These come from nearby Maryland and Virginia. In a short time they will arrive from Florida and sell for considerably more than they do now, yet their quality will be no better. Those available now are not as good as they have been, but, cooked carefully, they still reign as palate tempters.

Despite the fact we have bid the local cantaloupe farewell, they still continue to appear on the market. In fact, those on hand today have it all over that last crop which we thought marked their final exit. However, if you aren't a gambler by nature and don't want to take any chances on cantaloupes, you will play a lot safer in buying the Rocky Fords, selling at the same price. These come from Colorado.

Squash Scarce, but Good.

The end of the squash season is fast approaching, but just as though they would leave fond memories behind them, they are in excellent condition and boast a rich flavor. And they aren't charging extra for it, either. You can buy them for 5 cents a pound, an extremely reasonable price for last local squash. The Southern variety, soon to make its fall debut here, will be far higher. You'll probably pay 15 cents a pound for them and wonder why these aren't as good as the others.

Romaine lettuce makes a decorative background for salads, although it falls short of the iceberg variety in point of flavor. You'll find it playing hide and seek all over the market. Some dealers have a little of it. Some dealers say they can't get it. If you find it, you're lucky, or unlucky, for it's more expensive than the other lettuce. The bunches sell for the same, but the Romaine bunches are only half the size of the iceberg.

Women Show An Interest In Sciences

College Students Today Place Less Emphasis on Art Courses, Says Dean.

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 13 (AP).—In the reshuffle of things material, social and educational, the American woman has received a "New Deal" in higher education, says Miss Zoe Dobbs, dean of women at Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Training of women in the sciences has been raised to a parity with the arts and so-called cultural courses, Miss Dobbs believes.

Science Economics Aid.

"The sciences," she said, "have an economic as well as a cultural value, and this is the reason why so many college women now take scientific and technical courses.

"The college woman today places less emphasis on cultural courses. Instead of the classics, she takes business administration; instead of foreign languages, such as Latin and Greek, she studies commercial art, interior decoration, or even prepares herself to become a lawyer or physician."

The cause of this transition in educational demands by women was explained by Miss Dobbs as a result of the highly developed mechanical age which has created many opportunities for women in business and the professions. From the early demand for women in business as typists it has developed they not only are expert manipulators of many types of machines, but are competent as business or professional executives and specialists.

Machinery Is Liberator.

"Modern household conveniences," she said, "have removed much of the drudgery of housekeeping, allowing many housewives time to earn part of the family income. Perhaps, too, the desire of most American families for automobiles and other products of our mechanical age has increased the need for added income, causing many women to go into gainful occupations.

"I do not feel, however, that the increased interest in the technical training and her advent into the business world has entirely replaced the woman's love of cultural things in life. I believe it has resulted in the woman of today being vastly more practical and no doubt just as cultured as those of the nineteenth century."

They Demand Variety.

"In other words, a combination of the arts and sciences instead of the purely academic or so-called cultural subjects is demanded by the college woman today.

"At Auburn a happy combination of these is blended into the large number of courses taken by women students. Here they study architecture, interior decoration, commercial art, chemistry, education, science, literature, or agriculture.

"Naturally, the majority of them are preparing for vocations which have long been open to women—those of teaching and vocational home economics. Nevertheless, each year more and more young women come to Auburn for training in interior decoration, commercial art and even in architecture."

Author Averages 1,500 Words Daily

Fifteen hundred words a day is the average turnout of H. G. Wells, the British novelist, whose most recent book, "The Shape of Things to Come," is arousing wide comment.

Of course, when he dictates his material the output is higher.

While in Washington several years ago, Mr. Wells confessed this writing secret to a group of friends at a dinner given by a popular hostess. Mr. Wells expressed himself as being amazed at the amount of copy turned out by newspaper men and women in a single day.

In a letter to a Washington friend recently, Mr. Wells told an interesting anecdote of what happened at the unveiling of the statue to Thomas Hardy at Dorchester, scene of many of his novels. Sir James Barrie made the dedication address, taking as his keynote the words: "Hardy was a great man—that was his hard fate."

Sir James found the statue of Hardy so like him that he said: "It is so true of him, in fact, that I even know what is in his pockets, probably a piece of string and an old knife."

Precedence, With Capital 'P,' Hides Pitfalls for Unwary

Precedence always is spelled with a big "P" in Washington society, and it has many pitfalls for the unwary. Yet these can be avoided by the exercise of a little tact and some of the fundamental rules of polite society.

Washington has not forgotten how John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross and former Secretary of the Interior, once brushed aside prevailing rules of precedence in an amusing manner.

He had been invited to a dinner in his honor and, as he was a widower, the hostess naturally had planned upon being taken out by him.

But another Cabinet officer was there who ranked above Mr. Payne. The hostess knew nothing about precedence within the Cabinet itself. So, just as Secretary Payne was bowing in a courtly manner to his hostess and offering her his arm, up came the other Cabinet member and insisted the hostess go out with him.

Secretary Payne laughingly said: "I am honored to sit at any place at my hostess' table," and made way for the other Cabinet officer.

In the matter of precedence the Cabinet officer in question was correct, of course, but in the matter of social etiquette there is no doubt but that Secretary Payne had set the highest mark.

Posse Slays 3 In Louisiana Prison Mutiny

Three Others Captured, But Five Remain at Large.

Marksville, La., Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Possemen killed three fugitive desperadoes and captured three others today to climax a grim manhunt for eleven convicts who shot their way out of Angola Prison farm Sunday.

A wide search continued for five prisoners still at large.

The fugitives taken alive face the death penalty, authorities said, for their part in Sunday's bloody break, in which three guards and a convict were slain.

The three men surrendered after a brief and bloodless gun battle and were brought to jail here.

A band of the fugitives, surprised by a posse near Saline Point, fought a pitched battle. Two of them were killed and a third died in a hospital a few hours later. No officers or possemen were injured.

They escaped in one of several cars parked by visitors. They shot and wounded a prison captain who refused them the prison gate keys. He died of his wounds yesterday.

Culbertson on Bridge

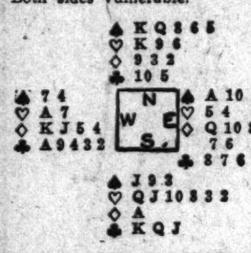
A Short Lead Defense.

One reason why the lead of a doubleton as a defense against a suit declaration is not extremely popular with many Bridge players is that they have not gone into the underlying principles sufficiently to understand when such a lead should be made and what course partner should follow provided he has the controlling card of the suit led. The lead of a doubleton is an effort to utilize the time factor to bring about the defeat of the Declarer, and if both the leader and his partner understand the lead and its proper handling by the partner, they will find it not a dangerous weapon, but an extremely effective one. For instance, when partner makes an opening lead which is marked as a short-suit Opening, it is generally safer to assume that it is a doubleton than that it is a singleton and in consequence ordinarily no effort should be made to win the first trick. The assumption is that the player making the Opening of the doubleton expects to regain the lead before the trumps are drawn and then desires to put his partner in for a ruff of the third round of the suit.

An example of a contract that was defeated by means of this lead, where other leads would permit the Declarer to fulfill his contract, is shown on the hand below, which was played in a recent Duplicate game.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



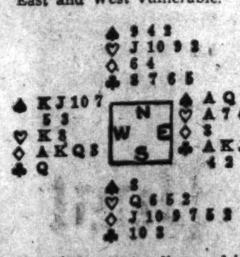
The eventual declaration was four hearts, which is the correct contract on the hand, North having shown spades during the auction. Against this contract, at one table, West opened the spade 7, which it was obvious to his partner, when the Dummy went down, could be nothing but a short-suit lead. The question was whether it was a doubleton or singleton. East correctly reasoned that South could not hold four spades, as otherwise he would have supported the spade suit at some time during the contracting, and that the lead must therefore be a doubleton. Inasmuch as East's only card of quick entry into his hand was the spade Ace, to play it now would probably defeat the purpose of the lead. He therefore, instead, played the Ten, and the Declarer won the first trick with the spade Knave. He now led the Knave of trumps, seeking to confuse the issue and to make his opponents believe that possibly he might have a finesses in the trump suit. However, West refused to be deceived, went up immediately with the Ace and led another spade, which was won by East, who returned the suit and permitted his partner to utilize his last trump for ruffing. Afterwards the Declarer was forced to lose a trick to the Ace of clubs and in consequence, through the selection of the best lead and by means of partnership cooperation, an apparently unbeatable contract was defeated.

The contract, as a matter of fact, was made at all the other tables, and in my opinion the defensive course adopted by West was the one best calculated to advance the partnership.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South makes a psychic Overcall after East has opened the bidding, should this prove a benefit or a detriment to the East and West players in reaching their final contract?

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Waves and Ripples of Radio

At 6:30 on a Saturday night to be announced the station will broadcast instructions for hunters during a half hour's variety program and give the first clew—a bucket filled with water 1 inch from the top, a stone weighing exactly 1 pound or an old-fashioned nightshirt.

Periodically six clews in all will be given until the hunt begins at 10:15. The first listener to bring all six articles into the studio will win prize money. Other prizes will go to first, second and third comers. At 10:30 WMAL will broadcast a description of the arriving hunters, and later let winners step to the microphone and tell how they won. The program will finish with music.

WMAL's entire announcing staff—Arthur Godfrey, John Mayo, Robert Youse and Stanley Bell—will be mobilized for the occasion. Assistant NBC Manager Carlton Smith is arranging the hunt.

Tonight's Whitecaps.

Buster Keaton, Fay Bainter, Morgan and Mack, 7; Show Boat, 8; Al Jolson, Paul Whiteman, 9; Sunshine Family, 10—WRC; Radio Joe, 6:30; President C. H. Marvin, George Washington University, 7:30—WMAL; Boswell Sisters, 7; Mystery Girl, 10:30—WJSV.

Letters protesting reduction of broadcast periods of Washington's Elder, Lightfoot Solomon (Church of God) Michaux from seven to two a week, are pouring into WJSV. The Elder radioed requests for them to see if his popularity was holding up.

A Brandywine woman said men in a nearby village congregate outside a speakeasy to hear the Elder.

Herman Melville.

When Herman Melville passed away he had acquired but little fame; a reader here and there would say, "It seems to me I've heard his name; oh, yes, by jings, I recollect, he wrote a yarn of South Sea Isles, of maidens far from circumspect who draped themselves in sunny smiles. Then for a time he seemed to click, and won some measure of renown; but later he wrote 'Moby Dick,' and proved he was an errant clown. It was a bughouse sort of tale, in which a crazy delegate pursued for years a crazy whale, and, having found it, met his fate. It was so foolish and absurd it wearied people who were sane; and Melville, that unlucky bird, went to the dump, there to remain." So Melville now was safely dead, oblivious to blame or praise; and then his "Moby Dick" was read by legions of ecstatic jays. And all at once the critics found the story was a masterpiece, and boosted it the whole world round, each season sees its vogue increase. By some the author is compared with Shakespeare, Milton and that lot; a greater genius never fared adown the centuries, they wot. I often pause and wonder why fame travels an erratic curve; it seems too bad that men must die to get the credit they deserve. Poor Melville felt that he had failed, that he was but a total loss; he had to die ere he was hailed as Master Workman, Chief and Boss.

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

New York.—When the stock exchange was forcibly closed recently by someone tossing a tear gas bomb into a ventilator, it was the third emergency closing in thirteen years.

The first was in the bomb explosion of 1920, when an unidentified person drove a wagon containing the bomb to the front of the subtreasury building and left it there. The other was two years ago when an electrical signal board caught fire.

It would be almost impossible today for Wall street to be bombed as it was in 1920. That district is the most thoroughly guarded one in the world. About 7,000 persons, besides policemen and detectives, who work in that neighborhood are constantly armed. No commercial vehicles, unless known to the police, are allowed to enter the district until they have been examined. All of Wall street is blanketed by a network of signal systems.

Broadway's Loss.

The death of E. Phocian Howard loses to the Broadway and turf world one of its most colorful characters. He was the type who reigned in the "Diamond Jim" Brady era, the glamorous sportsmen who wore dazzling clothes and were proud of their reputations as epicures and race horse authorities.

Times changed, but "Phosh" never changed the style of his clothes. They were expensive, tailor-made, with tight-fitting trousers and padded shoulders. One of his typical costumes was a light purple suit, green silk shirt, blue collar, red and blue striped tie, white spats and a greenish gray hat.

He was an excellent raconteur, and his speech was replete with pityh, witty and wise sayings. He was the first to utter that axiom that "all hoss players must die broke," and he said "Poker chips just don't seem to have no regular habitat." He and John McGraw published a gossipy sporting paper, and for it he wrote a racy, colorful column.

The paper was devoted strictly to gossipy news about horse racing, Broadway and faro games. His descriptions of faro games—he spoke of them as "Old Tiger growling for more red meat"— were said to be masterpieces of color language.

Chef Always with Him.

In his meanderings around from race track to track, he was always attended by "Fried Chicken" John, his Negro chef, famed for delectable cooking of the dish that gave him his name. "Phosh" always traveled around the race meets by train, but "Fried Chicken" John was sent ahead in style in the Howard limousine, with orders to have plenty of fried chicken ready when "Phosh" and his pals arrived.

The last of a great and glamorous age, E. Phocian Howard will be missed by those who see life in terms of the extraordinary.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Heart Disease in Children.

A great number of persons come out of childhood with hearts that are potentially crippled, and from which they will begin to suffer some 30 years later. Especially is that true of tall, spare, nervous, pale children who have been subject to sore throats, rheumatism, St. Vitus' dance and growing pains.

In the course of some of these childhood maladies the heart has been involved. The resultant heart attack was so mild in its acute stage that it was overlooked. Some one may have noticed that during an attack of sore throat the pulse was unduly fast or the child appeared to be too sick for just a sore throat, but nothing was definitely alarming, convalescence was speedy, and presently the attack was forgotten. In many such cases a mild heart involvement was responsible for the symptoms which caused uneasiness.

In addition to this type of mild heart attacks occurring along with sore throats and rheumatism in childhood there are types in which the heart is manifestly involved, and life is gravely menaced thereby. This article deals with the nursing and home care of such cases and is based on the large experience of Dr. J. E. Poynton, a British specialist in rheumatism and heart disease.

In this group of cases the disease is so severe that ordinarily insignificant details may tip the scales either way. Heart disease occasions anxiety and fear on the part of the patient, whether he is an adult subject to angina or a small child with carditis. Therefore, the atmosphere of a heart case must be conducive to calm and poise. The attendants must be soothing and reassuring. There must be no hurry and excitement, nor anything else that makes for nervousness and panic. If a child is in a hospital he should not be screened off. It is better for him to be in an open ward where he can see, hear and feel the reassurance of people about.

Sleeplessness must be prevented. The child can sleep with his head on a pillow if that is his wish. Above all, the sick child must not be hauled and pulled around. The less he is moved the better will be his chance of survival.

Insurance Men Plan to Attend Joint Session

Underwriters and Casualty Groups to Convene at Sulphur Springs.

Numerous local insurance men are preparing to attend the annual joint convention of the International Association of Casualty and Surety Underwriters and the national Association of Casualty and Surety Agents at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., September 26 to 28.

Gov. George White of Ohio has been asked to talk on "The Constitution and the New Deal." In view of the recent constitutional objections to President Roosevelt's recovery program by Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, and others, it is believed that the viewpoint of Gov. White, a former chairman of the Democratic national committee and one of the candidates for the namination for President at the Chicago Democratic convention last year, will be particularly timely.

Recovery Is Presented.

The convention program in its entirety has been arranged with the view of presenting a symposium on the recovery program. On the morning of September 26, Robert L. Lund, of St. Louis, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, will discuss the national industrial recovery act. President Lund was continuously in Washington while this law was under consideration and has followed its development closely since the NRA began functioning.

The agricultural adjustment act will be the subject of an address by C. D. Sturevant, of Chicago, president of the Bartlett-Frasier Co. and a former director of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Mr. Sturtevant has for years been connected with the grain business and is a national authority on his subject. The third speaker will be George S. Van Schaick, superintendent of insurance of the State of New York.

On September 27, in addition to Gov. White, there will be an address by Arthur A. Ballantine, of New York, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and now of the law firm of Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine. The new banking and securities laws will be analyzed by Mr. Ballantine. There also will be an address by Merton L. Brown, of Boston, commissioner of insurance of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and chairman of the executive committee of the national convention of insurance commissioners.

Banking Dinner Set.

The women's committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will hold its annual dinner meeting this evening at the Kennedy-Warren, according to announcement of Miss Constance D. Fogle, Riggs National Bank, chairman. W. W. Spaid, of the firm of W. B. Hibbs & Co., will be the guest speaker.

Mr. Spaid was president of the local institute chapter in 1914-15 and has maintained an active interest in the local banking school since his term of office as president. He is the donor of a handsome trophy, which is annually competed for in the chapter's golf tournament. He is also a past president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

The annual dinner of the women employes of Washington banks is held for the purpose of stimulating interest of women bankers in the educational work of the chapter and is always attended by a large and enthusiastic group.

Other speakers will be Raymond B. Dickey, dean of the faculty of Washington Chapter; Robert H. Lacey, cashier of Columbia National Bank and chapter president; Walter L. Sanderson, Hamilton National Bank, chairman of the educational committee; J. Earle McGeary, W. B. Hibbs & Co., chairman of the membership committee; T. Hunton Leith, assistant cashier, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, chairman of the committee arranging for the 1934 convention, to be held in Washington, D. C., and E. Wallace Schreiner, First National Bank of Alexandria, Va., chairman of the public speaking and debate committee of the chapter.

The chairman, Miss Fogle, will preside, and assitsing her with the dinner and program arrangements are the members of the women's committee.

U. S. Dollar Loses On Foreign Marts

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Inflationary influences were again predominant in foreign exchange markets today and substantial gains against the American dollar were recorded by leading European currencies.

The British pound sterling advanced 3¼ cents to a cable rate of $4.60, French francs were up .05 of a cent at 5.63 cents, Dutch guilders gained .48 of a cent at 58 cents and Belgian belgas and Swiss francs advanced .18 and .27 of a cent, respectively. German marks, the Scandinavians, Canadian dollars and Far Eastern funds were moderately higher.

Sterling declined in relation to French money, with the result that the price of bar gold in London rallied. Dealers attributed renewed weakness in the dollar to reports of a revival of agitation in Washington for currency expansion as a means of lifting commodity prices.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Cheerfulness continued on the stock exchange today with increased speculatory activity apparent. Oil shares were again strong, helped by favorable reports from America. Kaffirs improved and industrials were mostly firm. Gilt-edged securities were quiet while transatlantic issues remained dull and were inclined to ease owing to advices from Wall street. The market closed steady.

Paris—Lacking encouragement from Wall street and other exchanges, prices on the bourse slumped. Rentes, however, were firmer and international issues were resistant. The closing was indecisive.

Berlin — Additional buying enlivened prices on the boerse and the market closed higher.

Small Gains Are Recorded as Turnover Falls to 119,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Narrow fluctuations ruled the two-hour trading session on the Curb Exchange today. The market closed steady, with minor fractional gains sprinkled freely throughout the list, while wider gains were registered in a few scattered specialties. Trading was at the recent quiet pace, 119,000 shares being transferred.

A trace of easiness was evident in utilities. Leaders, including Electric Bond & Shares, and American Gas & Electric, lost minor fractions. Alcohols maintained a steady to firm tone, Hiram Walker advancing a point. Mining issues were neglected, but Newmont rose 2¾ points in meager dealings.

Singer Manufacturing added 5 points to recent sharp advances, while Tubize Chatillon "A" gained 3½. Aluminum Co. of America was reactionary, sagging 2 points. Oils recorded slight changes from yesterday's final quotations.

Credit Paper Sales Double During August

Baltimore, Sept. 13.—Gross purchases of commercial credit companies for August, 1933, were more than double purchases for August, 1932. The following statement was issued today by A. E. Duncan, chairman of the board:

"An excellent guide to the current general business trend is reflected through the purchases by commercial credit companies throughout the United States and Canada of current receivables from manufacturers, wholesalers and dealers against their customers—other manufacturers, wholesalers, dealers and retail installment purchasers. Our records do not show that unsold goods are piling up, but rather that they are moving freely to consumers.

"Gross purchases of these companies for August, 1933, were $21,570,140, compared with $9,797,392 for August, 1932, an increase of 120 per cent. Purchases for July, 1933, were $20,425,016, compared with $11,334,566 for July, 1932, an increase of 80 per cent. It is unusual for our August volume to be larger than for July. September volume is holding up very well.

"In addition to the above, the August volume of Textile Banking Co., New York, which is being acquired by Commercial Credit Co., was $7,793,805, compared with $4,865,933 for August, 1932, an increase of 60 per cent."

Buying of Material Is Urged in Survey

New York, Sept. 13.—The prudent business man will continue to protect his raw material needs for some distance ahead, and to scan with care all orders calling for deferred deliveries of products likely to advance with the general level of prices, says the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, in a current survey, which continues in part:

"Until more definite evidence materializes as to manufacturing costs, labor policies and prospective profits, further price irregularity in most raw materials is not improbable. Monetary and industrial prospects for the latter months of the year, however, justify expectations of a later resumption of the rising trend. Consumers are counseled to maintain supplies sufficient for several months' requirements."

Stocks Continue Climb In Spite of Dull Dealing

Firm Tone Is Maintained Throughout Half-Day Session; Gains Average Four-tenths; Sales Total 741,990 Shares.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—New York financial markets, limiting their activities to two hours because of the NRA holiday, maintained a firm tone today.

Trading was dull, but upward trends prevailed in stocks and cotton and bonds were a little better than steady, even though their averages closed unchanged.

Shares finished with advances of fractions to around a point, on the whole, and their improvement, even though meager, was accepted as encouraging in view of the negative showing of midweek business statistics. However, observers found it difficult to draw very definite conclusions because of the session's brevity. Sales totaled 741,990 shares.

United States Steel, American Telephone, General Electric, Westinghouse, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of California, Loew's, Chesapeake & Ohio and American Tobacco B were up fractions to a point.

Case jumped more than 2 on the strength of wheat-pit returns. Repeal issues were quietly firm as three more States joined the wet column. Kelvinator took a sprint into new high ground for the year and was active. Sugar stocks advanced.

Electric power output figures for last week were kept down by the Labor Day holiday. The gain over a year ago was also reduced, this time to 11.1 per cent, compared with the previous week's rise of 11.8.

Wall Street, doleful over this city's plans for increasing transfer taxes, finds the inflation question its biggest puzzle at the moment. Many in the financial community believe that inflationary tendencies will be limited to credit expansion, at least until NRA has had ample opportunity to show what it can do; However, recurrent rumors that more drastic measures are imminent usually find a prompt response in market circles.

Dollar exchange again receded, though dealings were quiet. The gold currencies advanced during trading hours here and our unit again lapsed under 70 cents, gold valuation.

New York Central Lines Loadings Drop in Week

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Freight loadings of the New York Central last week, which included Labor Day, totaled 90,326 cars, compared with 106,698 in the previous week. A year ago loadings amounted to 74,135 cars.

Bond Market Unchanged at Former Level

Leading Issues Follow Narrow Range; Sales, $4,817,000.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Traders were hesitant in today's brief session of the bond market and prices of leading issues generally were inclined to follow a narrow and unimportant range.

Sales totaled $4,817,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged from yesterday at 79.

There was a moderate demand for some railway liens, apparently based on optimistic reports of freight-car loadings on several of the leading lines. Bonds up around 1 to 2 points included some of Alleghany Corporation, Chicago & Northwestern, Hudson & Manhattan, Union Pacific and Wabash. Minor losses and gains, however, were the rule among the majority of the carriers.

Aside from bonds of Western Union, which got up around a point, the utilities were indifferent. Among the better industrials were General Theater 6s, up 1; McCrory 5½s, up 1, and Richfield Oil 6s, up 2½.

Obligations of Czechoslovakia advanced 2¾ to 3½ points, and issues of Dutch East Indies, Norway, Argentine and Brazil gained 1 to 2 or more. The Germans were irregular.

United States Government securities were mildly mixed. Liberty loans edged up a trifle, while most of the Treasuries were slightly lower.

Wool—The Textile Organon of the Tubize Chatillon Corporation, rayon producers, anticipates a decline in the next few months in wool consumption. It says stocks of domestic wools are the smallest in years and predicts more wool will be imported during the current season than in many years.

Worsted Yarns—Demand for worsted yarns has slackened this week, although there is a good demand for yarns for both men's and women's wear and specialty lines. Threat of higher prices in women's wear has induced some buying. An increase in sales before the end of the month is expected.

Hardware—Substantial improvement was shown in hardware sales during August compared with the same month a year ago, Hardware Age reports. Part of the increase in wholesale sales was due to shipment of seasonable merchandise sold on dating. Salesmen report the volume of orders has been curtailed by inability of a large number of merchants to obtain credit.

Floor Coverings—A moderate volume of business has been done by the primary floor-covering market this week, and while not as brisk as sellers anticipated, they look for a steady call the rest of the week, due to indications of higher prices in the near future.

Textile Plants Await Public's Price Reaction

Executives Want Evidence Consumers Will Stand Increased Costs.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—The cotton textile industry, first to adopt a code under the NRA, is now anxiously awaiting the public reaction to higher prices.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, explains that mill executives are awaiting convincing evidence that the consuming public understands the changes which have taken place and is willing to meet the increased costs.

Sloan, in an interview, pointed out that the number of persons on the industries pay roll had been greatly expanded, but "higher wages and shorter hours have had the natural effect of causing an increase in manufacturing costs and prices of cotton goods naturally reflect these increases."

Phase of Problems.

The present phase of cotton mill problems, he continued "has close connection, therefore, with the NRA efforts to encourage purchasing.

If the NRA buying campaign serves to enlighten the public as to the sinister implication of low prices, and convinces the public that a positive detriment to their interests exists in inordinately low price levels and the resulting dissipation of capital and depression and misfortune for industry, a long step will have been taken toward the resumption of normal business."

Sloan, who is chairman of the economic planning and fair practice agency under the cotton textile code, stressing the marked gains in employment, said: "More than 100,000 additional workers were employed in cotton mills in July than three months previously; the total amount in wages paid in July was 60 per cent greater than in April, and more than double the total wages paid in July, 1932.

Wages Are Higher.

"Preliminary reports indicate that total wages paid to cotton mill workers during the last week in August were substantially ahead of the pay rolls early in July. This is a reflection of the shorter work week and of the activity of the industry on orders that buyers placed for future delivery prior to the effective date of the code."

But now the task is to educate the buying public to the benefits resulting from higher costs and higher prices. Sloan said: "The NRA is with good reason pointing out that the entire public has a stake in the drive to bring about constructive increases in prices, as it is obvious that without the public's sympathetic understanding of the reasons for price increases, the administration's plans for recovery would fall to the ground."

The cotton textile industry has now been operating under the code for nearly two months. The code affects approximately 500,000 workers in cotton textile manufacturing, and many more in other branches of the textile industry which have come under this code. Hours of labor have been reduced from "a range of 48 to 60 hours a week to 40 hours, and mills are, in general, paying the same wages for the shorter week that they paid for the longer week.

Steel Output Is Reduced on Lighter Buying

Code Perplexities Blamed Also as All Districts Drop in Activity.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Increasing evidence that consumption is decreasing, plus the perplexities growing out of new code prices and regulations is reflected in a 4-point drop in ingot production to 41 per cent of capacity this week, Iron Age reported today.

"In many cases labor difficulties are blamed for the shrinkage in demand," the review states, "but whatever the reasons, there is growing apprehension over the current business trend and an increasing conviction that September will prove the critical month in the NRA program."

All Districts Lose.

All steel districts showed losses except Buffalo, where a slight expansion raised production from 41 to 44 per cent of capacity. New business has been very light except in certain products on which advances have been announced for the fourth quarter.

Need for support from the heavy industries becomes more pressing, the review said, as the automobile industry approaches the time when it will bring out its new models.

Government-aid construction projects are slow in maturing. Railroad buying remains at low ebb and for that reason proposals of the Government to help finance expenditures for the carriers have been received with interest in the steel industry.

Price Stand Assailed.

"The announcement that rail purchases would be financed only on condition that prices be reduced, was, however, regarded as out of keeping with the spirit of the recovery program," Iron Age said.

"Rails are a high-quality product, necessarily so because human safety depends upon their soundness, and yet are now being quoted at $4.33 a gross ton below the average price of all other finished steel commodities as measured by the Iron Age steel composite.

"If anough rail tonnage were offered under Government auspices it is entirely possible mills would agree to a reduction in price, keeping in mind, of course, that their costs are largely related to volume."

Wheat Jumps On Stand to Boost Prices

Washington Reports Provide Impetus for Rise; All Grains Rise.

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP).—Like a giant aroused in earnest, grain leaped upward today with a force rarely equaled of late, closing buoyant, wheat 4⅝ cents a bushel higher.

Washington reports supplied the impetus, especially word that the Roosevelt administration was determined to hoist commodity values 33 per cent, to the level of 1914. Contributing momentum were advices that export of 30,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels of Pacific Coast wheat would be financed by the United States Government, and that the President was extending full Federal backing to get banks to expand credit operations without delay.

Wheat finished strong at the topmost point reached, 4¼ to 4⅝ above yesterday's close; corn, 2⅛ to 2⅝ up; oats, 1⅛ to 1½ advanced, and provisions showing a rise of 5 to 15 cents.

Helping Upward Sweep.

Helping the upward sweep of the wheat market at the last were Washington reports that a $60,000,000 emergency farm relief program was under consideration by President Roosevelt, and that the Government wheat acreage reduction campaign was making rapid progress, with 91 per cent of Kansas acreage signed up.

Throughout the day, aggressive concerted buying attributed to big Eastern interests formed an outstanding feature of wheat trade.

Scarcely less impressive was the fact that again and again the speculative found itself swept bare of offerings, and the market giving evidence of having been caught in an oversold condition.

Market Moves Steadily.

At no time did any sharp setbacks in wheat prices develop, the market moving almost uninterruptedly upward from start to finish. Absence of excitement rather than the reverse characterized the powerful orderly advance. Little else than Washington administration moves received the least notice, except continued adverse crop reports from Argentina and Australia.

There were also advices that recent estimates of the 1933 wheat yield in France were about 10,000,000 bushels too large.

Corn and other grains joined the upward movement of wheat. Barley gained about 3 cents, helped by three more States voting in favor of prohibition repeal.

Holiday Urged In Ginning to Boost Cotton

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 13 (AP).—A South-wide ginning holiday until cotton and cottonseed prices increase was suggested by Gov. Blackwood to a mass meeting of farmers and agricultural leaders from four large cotton-growing States here Tuesday.

The governor, prevented by illness from attending, suggested the holiday in a letter to the mass meeting, read by Dr. W. W. Long, director of the State extension service.

The States represented at the meeting were Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina, all of which sent official spokesmen. Leaders present included:

L. O. Bracken, of the Alabama State Department of Agriculture, and S. F. Hobbs, of Selma, Ala.; K. W. Barnes, secretary of the State Department of Agriculture, representing North Carolina; Herman De la Perriere, of Hoschton, Ga., special representative of Gov. Talmadge, and G. C. Adams, Georgia State commissioner of agriculture.

More than 2,000 South Carolina cotton growers and legislators thronged the meeting hall.

State Representative Neville Bennett, of Marlboro, took the speaker's stand to urge the adoption of the "Marlboro plan," which calls for a South-wide ginning holiday and immediate purchase of coton by the Government at parity prices.

Bennett was applauded when he called for "a Blue Eagle on the farms" and asserted "what we want is not 15 or 18 cents for cotton next fall but a better price now."

J. Skottowe Wannamaker, of St. Matthews, president of the American Cotton Association, moved for appointment of a steering committee to receive plans and resolutions and prepare from them "a definite plan."

Wannamaker's motion was adopted and a committee named with instructions to report at 2 p. m. Pending its report, the meeting was recessed.

Tobacco Group Votes To Postpone Auction

Durham, N. C., Sept. 13 (AP).—The sales committee of the United States Tobacco Association today voted to postpone the opening of auction tobacco sales in the Middle, Old Bright and other belts where sales have not started by as many sales-days as the South Carolina and New Bright belt markets stayed closed.

Mexico May Start Credit Union Plan

Mexico, D. F., Sept. 13 (U.P.).—The government's purpose of providing credit facilities for small operators of all classes has found expression in a presidential decree which created the machinery for serving borrowers unable to find banking accommodation. The general law of credit institutions provided the authority for the decree.

A fund of $600,000 is established by the decree to guarantee the credits which banks already operating now will be encouraged to extend to small borrowers. The borrowers will be required to organize themselves into credit unions, which will establish standards and credit ratings to which members must conform. The banks themselves must supply the funds for the loans which are anticipated, but the two million peso fund will be used to minimize the banks' risks.

The fund is to be deposited with the Bank of Mexico, which will represent the government in organizing the credit unions and in dealing with the banks participating in the project.

In an explanatory statement, Treasury Secretary Alberto J. Pani expressed confidence that the organization of credit unions would benefit their members far beyond the matter of finance, which will be the primary object.

Greece and Russia Sign Trade Treaty

Moscow, Sept. 13 (AP).—A trade agreement regulating currency remittances by Greece to the Soviet Union was signed at Athens last Friday, it was learned today.

All proceeds from the sale of grain, Russia's principal export, are to be remitted without restrictions. Up to 31½ per cent of receipts from the sale of other goods will be payable to the Greek Mercantile Marine for chartered vessels, and the balance will cover Soviet purchases in Greece.

Dairy System In Wisconsin Seen Menaced

Madison, Wis., Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Wisconsin dairy farmers, who induced farmers of other States to enter the same business, have built a Frankenstein which threatens their industry.

Wisconsin earned an enviable reputation in the dairy business. Fast milk trains carried its fluid products to far distant consumers in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York.

The fame of Wisconsin's dairy cattle also was carried afar. The State was the first to free its herds from bovine tuberculosis. A market for these cattle, as well as their milk, was developed throughout the country.

Farmers are Encouraged.

Wisconsin encouraged farmers of other States to enter the dairy business. Booster trains carried prize Wisconsin cattle everywhere demonstrating the possibilities of dairying. The State Agricultural College became a focal point for potential dairymen.

Today, the States which have developed their dairying to a plane approaching the Wisconsin standards, likewise are seeking the business which Wisconsin has enjoyed.

Milk-Sale Regulations.

In New York it is a regulation against sale of milk more than 48 hours old. A Pennsylvania law limits sales to milk inspected by one of that State's five inspectors, who have not time to go so far afield as Wisconsin. Illinois seeks to replace expiring contracts of Wisconsin members of the milk producers' association supplying the Chicago market with Illinois-producer agreements.

The Wisconsin dairyman has his back to the wall in a fight for existence. Only 7 per cent of the fluid milk which he produces is consumed by his State.

Gov. Albert G. Schmedeman has threatened retaliatory boycotts against products of States discriminating against Wisconsin milk. He hopes, however, to avoid such an economic warfare between States by obtaining Federal standards which would prevent States from banning any milk imports which could meet these Federal qualifications.

Russia Makes Loans to Assist Peasants in Raising of Cattle

Moscow, Sept. 13 (AP).—With the slogan "a cow for every collective farmer," the Soviet government has launched a campaign to encourage the breeding of cattle by creating a fund of 35,000,000 roubles (nominally $17,500,000) to be loaned to those collective peasants who are unable to buy their own.

One million cowless collective members are to be helped in this way to buy one calf each under a joint decree issued by Joseph Stalin, secretary general of the Communist party, and V. Molotov, president of the council of Peoples' Commissars.

By this method the government hopes not only to improve the lot of the peasant, but gradually to build up the country's cattle herds which were enormously depleted through wholesale slaughtering by those who opposed collectivization in its earlier stages.

Collective farmers owning more than one cow are to be called on to sell to their less fortunate comrades. State dairy farms also will participate. Special inducement is offered the former to part with their cattle. This is in the form of reductions in their milk and meat taxes.

The individual sales are to be made under government supervision contracts at fixed prices to prevent profiteering. Each buyer may call on the state for a loan up to 50 per cent of the purchasing price. He is allowed one year in which to repay it.

New York City Bank Stock Issues Drop

New York, Sept. 13.—The New York City bank stock market again reacted during the past week, with the result that the group on the average now yields about 5½ per cent.

The aggregate value of the 16 leading issues, as compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster, ended the week at $1,435,846,000, compared with $1,493,856,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $58,010,000, or 3.9 per cent. The low point for the year to date, namely, $1,065,746,000, was recorded on April 5.

The current average yield of the 16 stocks of 5.46 per cent compares with a yield of 5.25 per cent reported on September 1. The current market value of the 16 stocks is now 1.09 times their known book value against 1.14 on September 1. Based upon current figures the 16 stocks are now quoted at an average of 10.5 times their known earnings against 10.9 on September 1.

Zinc and Lead Climb Is Boon To Wisconsin

Platteville, Wis., Sept. 13 (U.P.).—"Boom" times have returned to southwestern Wisconsin, bringing new hopes for prosperity in lead and zinc mining industries which lay idle more than a decade.

Recent discovery of a new use for zinc, in an alloy known as "white metal," revived a market from which the Wisconsin miners were forced a dozen years ago by competition from Missouri and Rocky Mountain fields.

Grant, Iowa and Lafayette Counties, among the oldest in the State, are leading centers in revival of the romantic industry from which Wisconsin got its nickname, the Badger State.

This mining industry was one of the first in the State. Its pioneers dug holes in the ground to spend their winters in semihibernation, like badgers.

The mining industry reached its peak during the World War, when it supplied munition materials, as it had done in the Civil War. It died out in 1921.

Chicken coops were rented as lodging houses. Crowds of miners walked in the streets because sidewalks were not large enough.

Other towns experienced "booms," although of less intensity. Prospectors sought new fields in the vicinity of Belmont, Wisconsin's first capital.

Timbers in old mines were replaced and operations resumed.

The "boom" has been gradual in most cases, but its effects are noticeable, and inhabitants of this region between the Wisconsin and Mississippi River valleys see prospects of industrial activity that will bring back the prosperity of "old days."

Building Gains Over Country During August

New York, Sept. 13.—Further expansion in the building industry is reflected in the August returns to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. For the third month in succession the expenditures for building have been above those of the previous year. The total value of building permits for 215 identical cities for the month of August amounted to $32,422,968, as compared with $27,565,795 for August, 1932, an increase of 17.6 per cent. As compared with the preceding month the gain is 10 per cent, as against a normal seasonal rise at this time of about 1 per cent.

New York City also made a favorable showing for the month, the August permits totaling $5,249,530, a rise of 16.3 per cent over July and of 18 per cent over August last year. For the 214 cities outside of New York, building expenditures for August aggregated $27,173,438. This was a gain of 8.8 per cent over the previous month and of 17.5 per cent over August, 1932.

Executives to Get Bonus.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—The executive personnel of Atlas Tack Co. is to receive a stock bonus in recognition of progress made by the company in the past year. Directors have authorized distribution of 1,000 shares of Atlas stock, purchased in the open market, in amounts to be determined by the president. Six new directors have been added to the board.

India and British Trade Treaty Proves Success

London, Sept. 13 (AP).—Praise for the effect of the Ottawa agreements on British trade with India was paid in a report issued today by the department of overseas trade.

"For the first time," said the report, "the advantageous effect of preferential rates of duty now enjoyed by United Kingdom goods is apparent. In nearly every item in which there is a preference the United Kingdom has improved her percentage of trade and in most cases United Kingdom shipments have actually increased, although total shipments have been reduced."

Electricity Output Gains Over 1932

New York, Sept. 13.—Net electric output, excluding sales to other utilities, of 52,408,242 units (kwh) for the week ended September 2, as reported by the Associated Gas & Electric System, was 8.1 per cent larger than for the corresponding week of last year. This increase of 8.1 per cent compares, however, with a 13.5 per cent increase in the week ended August 26 and a 17.6 per cent increase in the week ended July 1. The tendency of power output, as indicated in the weekly figures of the Associated Gas & Electric System, while continuing to run ahead of a year ago, is toward a narrowing of the margin of gain. This is a reflection of some slowing down of manufacturing activity in the territory served by Associated operating units.

Net electric output of the Associated properties for the month of August, figures for which are just at hand, amounted to 236,200,442 units, an increase of 29,940,248 units over August, 1932, or 14.5 per cent. For the twelve months ended August 31, net output of 2,565,817,643 units was slightly higher than in the previous like period, the increase being one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Gas send-out of the Associated System for the week ended September 2 was 287,552,700 cubic feet, which was 6.4 per cent above that for the same week of last year, caused by cooler weather conditions on some of the properties as well as increases in industrial and commercial consumption. For the month of August, gas send-out was two-tenths of 1 per cent lower than that in August, 1932.

Cotton Prices Rise as Buying Is Stimulated

December Sells at 9.36 as General Market Gains 25 to 31 Points.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Reports of active demand for cotton goods stimulated mill buying and covering in the cotton market today prior to the noon closing.

With offerings limited, prices rallied rapidly and finished near the best levels for the day. December sold up from 9.13 to 9.38 and closed at 9.36, the general market showed net advances of 25 to 31 points.

The market was steady at the opening. The South sold in a moderate way, but offerings were light and the early market displayed a steady undertone.

Despite a favorable view of the weekly weather report, quotations continued to work higher on word of increased business in cotton goods at advancing prices and trading became active during the last half hour.

Grain Aids Market.

Strength in the grain market aided the tone. May contracts worked up to 9.85, or 31 points net higher during the last few minutes.

According to the weekly weather and crop bulletin, abundant sunshine and precipitation, mostly of a local character, made another favorable week for the cotton crop.

However, the report added that rains or dampness favored weevil activity over portions of the belt. Private reports also spoke of increased weevil activity and excessive shedding, but the market appeared to be devoting more attention to other developments.

Exports today, 54,177, making 840,485 so far this season. Port receipts, 31,729; U. S. port stocks, 3,044,355. Today's range of prices:

Futures Price Range.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firm, closing 9 to 22 points net higher on scattered covering and local buying, promoted by the advance in lard and cotton and the sharp rally in grain. Sales were 6 contracts. Bleachable spot closed 4.50; September, 4.55; December, 4.85; January, 4.98; March, 5.05.

The census report estimated the August consumption of cottonseed oil at 234,114 barrels, against 297,839 in July, and 346,753 in August last year.

World's Cotton Use Exceeds First Estimate

New York, Sept. 13.—Cotton mills of the world used approximately 273,000 more bales of American cotton last season than was indicated by preliminary estimates, according to a report issued today by the New York Cotton Exchange Service. The Exchange Service has raised its estimate of last season's consumption from 14,132,000 bales to 14,405,000.

On the other hand, the world stock of American cotton at the end of the season, on July 31, was 239,000 bales less than previously indicated. The service now estimates it at 11,736,000 bales, as compared with the preliminary estimate of 11,975,000.

The reduction of 239,000 bales in the estimated carryover considerably more than offsets the increase of 96,000 bales in the Government crop forecast issued on Friday, when the latter is converted to a running bale basis.

The result is a reduction of 141,000 bales in the estimated world supply of American cotton for this season. The supply is now 24,066,000 bales, as compared with the previous indication of 24,207,000 bales.

World consumption of 14,405,000 bales last season was larger than in any previous season since the 1928-29 season. It compares with 12,506,000 two seasons ago, 11,113,000 three seasons ago, and 13,021,000 four seasons ago. In the 1928-29 season, the world used 15,226,000 bales of the American staple. The carryover of 11,736,000 bales is well above the average of recent seasons, but it shows a reduction of 1,492,000 bales from last year. The carryover last year was 13,228,000 bales, two years ago 8,919,000, and three years ago 6,187,000.

It is pointed out that if the crop should be equal to the Government forecast, and if the world should consume the same amount of American cotton this season as it used last season, the carryover next year would be over 2,000,000 bales less than this year, and would be brought down to a level of approximately 9,600,000 bales.

Although that carryover would be well above the normal end-season stocks of 4,500,000 to 5,000,000 bales, it would show a very great decrease from the peak carryover of 13,228,000 bales last year.

With the cotton trade thus making substantial progress toward bringing supply and demand for the American staple into balance, interest is being centered on the Government program for another drastic reduction in production next year. The announcement that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will seek to reduce the acreage next year to 25,000,000 acres implies that the 1934 crop will be the smallest in over a decade if growing conditions should be normal.

Such a planted acreage would produce a crop of only about 8,600,000 bales, with average weather and insect conditions. If world consumption next season should be no larger than last season, the carryover at the end of next season would be actually below the average of years prior to the world depression.

Air Reduction Declares Extra Share Return

Engineers Public Service Votes to Defer Action on Dividend.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Air Reduction Co., today declared an extra dividend of 75 cents a share on the common stock in addition to a regular quarterly dividend of the same amount. Both are payable october 15 to stock of record September 30.

Directors of Engineers Public Service Co. today voted to defer action on the quarterly dividends for the $5, $5.50 and $6 preferred stocks, normally payable October 1.

For the twelve months ended July 31, Associated Gas Electric System reports gross operating revenues of $94,782,544. This is a decrease of $6,736,116, or 7 per cent under the total reported for the previous twelve-month period.

Total gross operating revenues for the twelve months ended July, 1933, were about $100,000 less than the total revenues for the twelve months ended a month previously, namely, June, 1933, in spite of the large increases in electric output reported for the past few months, which have been around 15 per cent, as compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year.

Operating expenses, maintenance, &c., for the twelve months ended July, 1933, totaled $45,786,145, a decrease of $2,348,826, or 5 per cent. Taxes, the only increase in the statement, were up $628,825 to $8,933,400, an increase of 8 per cent, serving to offset to a considerable degree the management's savings in expenses.

Business Failures Set Lowest Mark

New York, Sept. 12.—Business failures in the United States for the last week of August were again down to the low point of the year, for a full week.

The number, according to the records of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended August 31 was 311, compared with 326 and 312, respectively, in the two preceding weeks, and 549 a year ago.

The South continued to make relatively much the larger reduction over last year. The decline at the East and the West was also considerably marked as to the number, and there were fewer defaults than a year ago for the Pacific Coast States.

Losses in South.

Compared with the preceding week this year, the greater part of the reduction was at the South. Only a trifling change appeared at the other three geographical divisions.

Of the past week's failures in the United States, 210 had liabilities of $5,000 or more in each instance, against 210 and 201, respectively, in the two weeks preceding, and 363 similar defaults a year ago.

Gold Freeing Seen as Attack On Depression

Bankers Regard Roosevelt Move as Step to Boost Nation's Wealth.

New York, Sept. 13.—In a discussion of gold and the recovery program in their current Weekly Observations, Hornblower & Weeks state that by sponsoring the Nation's gold industry, the administration would direct a frontal attack upon the depression, comparable in effect to the decrees which reopened the banking system, the balancing of the Federal operating budget, and the courageous smashing of our deflation cycle, by cutting our currency adrift from its fixed gold ratio in the foreign exchange markets.

They emphasize that the production of gold should stimulate the use of all other commodities. "To achieve the degree of industrial and investment confidence necessary to bring about a very substantial increase in our gold output," they state, "the administration only needs to free the gold mining industry from the restraints arbitrarily put upon it in connection with the banking crisis last March.

"The law of supply and demand which is carrying gold to record highs in the London free market will supply a spontaneous expansion within the gold industry of unpredictable proportions. The failure to push this possible gold production of this country at this time may be due to the incompleteness of the administration's recovery program.

"Apparently a free gold market in the United States would be the answer. Within a year, we look for a complete and logical change in the investment position of the gold industry."

Commodity Index Moves Downward

New York, Sept. 13.—The Daily Weighted Price Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was slightly lower on each business day of the past week and on Thursday, September 7, stood at 99.81, the first time since August 16 that the index has gone below 100. The latest index compares with 102.31 on the same day of the previous week and 103.58 on August 7. On the corresponding day of last year the index was 82.06. The decline of the past week has brought the index 12.1 per cent below the high of July 18, while the gain over the low of January 20 is 47.1 per cent.

Nation's Farm Products Maintain Better Prices

By U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Prices of leading farm products were fairly well maintained as a group during the first ten days of September. Gains appeared in several lines which were weak last month, including eggs, meats, and most kinds of livestock. All responded favorably to lighter supplies.

The wool market still tended upward with active demand for raw material and finished goods. Hides and calf skins have lost part of recent sharp gains. Grain and cotton sold a little lower, discounting better crop conditions. Feeds declined with grain. Hog markets were dull and unchanged.

Butter markets were fairly steady, but the trend was slightly downward in the Middle West, especially on sales for future delivery. Cheese markets did not change much. Egg markets show stronger tone because fresh receipts are decreasing. Prices of dressed poultry are well maintained, despite tendency to increasing supplies at this season. Potatoes and some other vegetables have declined rather sharply with larger main crop receipts. Apple markets are only fairly steady in price.

Cotton Slightly Lower.

Spot cotton prices have declined slightly since the beginning of the month, but the average is still above that of a year ago. The demand for spot cotton continues small, but growers seem not anxious to sell.

Recent showers and much cloudy weather over large areas have made crop conditions less favorable. Picking is becoming quite general. A United States cotton crop of 13.4 million bales in 1933 is indicated by the cotton crop report of the Department of Agriculture.

Acreage remaining for harvest is estimated at 30,000,000 acres, and that removed from production, through the activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, as approximately 10.4 million acres, which is 92,000 acres more than was anticipated last month.

Grains Mostly Lower.

Domestic cash wheat markets were dull during the first ten days of the month, and prices declined 2 to 3 cents per bushel, along with futures. Marketings of winter wheat were relatively light. The quality is good, with 90.4 per cent of the receipts at Kansas City during August grading No. 3 or better. Demand was principally from mills but was of only moderate volume, reflecting the slow inquiry for flour.

Corn markets turned weaker under the influence of more favorable weather for late crops and a slackening demand for current offerings. Country shippers appeared more inclined to sell than when prices were advancing.

Oats markets were fairly steady, with markets in drought areas relatively firmer than those in other sections. Barley markets tended to decline with other grains, but an active inquiry for malting barley at Minneapolis held prices of cash grain firm. Inquiry for feed barley was dull and prices lower at most markets.

Livestock Receipts Moderate

Cattle, sheep and lamb receipts were slightly smaller at midwestern markets. Hog receipts increased materially, although inaccurate because of the lack of exact information as to the numbers received on Government account at a few markets. Cattle prices at Chicago were under pressure, declining slightly during the first ten days of September.

Receipts continued large, as compared with a year earlier, but beef is moving into consumptive channels at a fairly regular rate. Cattle slaughter under Federal inspection for August was the largest for the month since 1919.

Trade reports are to the effect that plentiful supplies of light and medium weight cattle that have been on feed for several months are available, but that longfed weighty cattle are becoming rather scarce. Large runs of Western grass cattle are to be expected from now on, and will probably carry more in killing flesh condition.

Chicago Hog Market.

Hogs marketed under the emergency plan continued the main center of attraction at Chicago. Pen room was at a premium. The average cost at Chicago was $3.86, as compared with $4.16 for the week ended September 10, 1932. An unexpectedly sharp advance in the fat lamb market sent prices up 50-75 cents at Chicago.

A wide variation in the quality of range lambs continued and price trends in the immediate future will depend less on numbers of Western lambs marketed than on the percentage of those in thin flesh, which is liberal. Most native lambs sold within a price spread of $7.25-$7.50.

The aged sheep market was fairly dependable, although no material price changes were recorded, 1.75@2.75 taking most of the common to choice ewes. Country demand continued to support strong to higher prices in the feeding lamb division, but the best reported price on 67-pound kinds stood at $6.25. The finer grades of Ohio and similar wools were slow but very firm in Eastern markets, while medium qualities were strong. Western-grown wools sold freely at the advance. All qualities of graded bag lines of 64's and finer territory wools, bulk strictly combing made 80 cents, scoured basis.

Butter Markets About Steady.

The butter markets continued nearly steady the first ten days of September. Stocks continue to accumulate in storage, whereas a year ago they were gradually being reduced. Stocks on hand are considered the heaviest early September holdings on record with the exception of 1919.

Future butter contracts on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange developed a slightly downward trend. Receipts of cheese at leading markets in early September were considered lighter than those of the corresponding period last year, trade was moderate and prices fairly steady.

Roasting chickens are increasing in supply, particularly the larger sizes, but the market holds firm with most sales around the outside quotations and some of the better kown marks bringing a slight additional premium. Small supplies of spring turkeys are now reaching the market. Most of the young hens and toms are selling around 25 to 28 cents, but stocks of poorer quality range irregularly lower.

Produce Tends Lower.

Potatoes are holding well at the lower level, sustained by reports of a lighter crop. Onions, cabbage and apples are also fairly steady at present. Chicago is firm on Northern white stock at $1.75 to $2 per 100 pounds by carlot. Eastern potatoes are steady at $2 in Maine and New Jersey producing sections. City markets range $2 to $2.25.

Onions range mostly 75 cents to $1 per 50 pounds in the large markets and around 80 cents at Eastern country shipping points. Bulk cabbage is firm at $17 to $18 per ton in western New York. Wealthy apples are nearly steady at near 90 cents a bushel in New York producing sections and 65 cents to $1 in city markets.

Failures Drop To Low Point During August

New York, Sept. 13.—Business failures in the United States for the month of August continued at a low total as to the number. According to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., there were 1,472 such failures, that number being less than for any August back to 1925. This year's figures compare with 2,796 similar defaults in August of last year, the latter an unusually high record. The reduction from the total of a year ago was no less than 24.2 per cent.

The number of insolvencies recorded from month to month this year has been in steady retrogression, with the reduction particularly large in July and August. A decline for each month as the year advances generally is experienced. The change a year ago was not nearly so well defined as in most other years, August failures in 1932 being higher than for any preceding record for that month. The number, 2,796, was the first instance of the 2,000-mark being exceeded. For previous years back to 1925, the total varied from 1,595 in August, 1928, to 1,944 in August, 1931.

Liabilities in August also were reduced from those of a year ago. The total amounted to $42,776,049. In August, 1932, it was $77,031,212. In July of this year, liabilities reported of $27,481,103 were the smallest for any month in a number of years past. The increase from July to August was due to a number of large defaults. Still, the reduction from the amounts involved in the failures for August, 1932, as well as for most of the months since, has been very heavy.

The monthly and quarterly failure figures, showing the number and the amount of liabilities, are contrasted below:

Cost Yardstick Is Tennessee Power Unit Aim

Government Electric Plant to Respect Private Rights, Lilienthal Says.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 13 (AP).—Government production and distribution of electric power will not mean disaster to private companies, says David E. Lilienthal, member of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Asked if he viewed the valley program, where the Government has announced it will spend $106,000,000 for development of power, reforestation and reclamation projects under a plan conceived by President Roosevelt, as a social experiment or an attempt to develop a yardstick with which to compare costs of electric energy being sold by private companies, Lilienthal replied that while both would enter into the question, the yardstick theory is definitely in the picture as a major step.

Seeking Fair Return.

"We must develop methods of cost accounting to learn what is a fair return for power," Lilienthal said. "While some costs of a general nature are comparable, such as meter reading, office maintenance and so on, other factors enter which make the picture different for different areas.

"Public ownership of power is just another method of public control when other forms of regulation break down or do not exist. If State utility commissions are not giving this public control, then it may be necessary for the Government to step in, and by distributing power itself show what is a fair rate to charge. This is the yardstick method. Power is a monopoly and must be controlled by some method.

"When it comes to selecting areas in which the yardstick method will be used we shall select it on the basis of business rather than for competitive or social reasons.

Nothing Is Punitive.

"I think it should be understood," he continued, "that nothing in our program is punitive. We do not intend to confiscate anybody's property without due return for the investment, neither do we intend to deal unfairly with any interest.

"Public competition in the past has meant neither death nor disaster to private companies. They usually have found that they can adjust themselves to the competition of the public agency."

Granted that an ample supply of cheap power will be available in the Tennessee Valley, Lilienthal was asked how a market was to be provided.

Appeal to People.

"In the first place," he said, "we must make electric power attractive to the people. If it is provided cheap enough and a man finds, for example, that he can run his sawmill cheaper with electricity than he can with coal, then, of course he will use electricity.

"Also we must assume that a supply of cheap power is one way of raising the income of the people so as to provide an increased standard of living. This means that the people will be given the opportunity to buy more electric stoves, refrigerators, washers and

Lenore Ulric First of National's Touring Stars—Theater Bills for New Week

Definite announcement was made yesterday by Manager Stephen E. Cochran of Mr. William Harryman Rapley's National Theater that the inauguration of the major season of road-show bookings will follow hard on the heels of the three-week preliminary season of guest-star revivals, on October 2.

Thus the new season of legitimate drama will proceed uninterruptedly from last Monday night's opening, with Corinne Griffith in Noel Coward's "Design for Living," to the beginning of the season of touring companies, which will have its inception on October 2 with Lenore Ulric in a new Shubert attraction, "Her Man of Wax," to be offered as first of the American Theater Society's subscription list of six plays.

For the following week, beginning Monday, October 9, Pola Negri will appear at the National in another Shubert play, bearing the title of "Trip to Presburg." This also will be one of the American Theater Society's subscription plays.

If, as at present anticipated, Washington's own star, Ina Claire, comes to the National for the week of Monday, October 16, in the Theater Guild's production of S. N. Behrman's comedy, "Biography," half of the subscription plays promised for the new season by the American Theater Society of Washington already will have been presented.

For the third and last of the preliminary season's guest-star productions, Edgar Wallace's "Criminal-at-Large," the National reports the special engagement of Nance O'Neil, one of the most distinguished dramatic stars of the native stage. There has been much angling for Miss O'Neil's service during this brief introductory season of revived stage successes, but it was not until yesterday afternoon that her name was secured to the dotted line for an appearance here the week of September 25.

Boston Symphony Coming.

Telegraphic information reaches this desk from W. H. Brennan, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, that the board of trustees of that celebrated organization have determined upon a series of three concerts in Washington this season, under the conductorship of Serge Koussevitzky, serving his tenth year as director of the orchestra.

Up to the present, plans for one or more appearances of the Boston Symphony here this season have been purely tentative, pendnig determination of the attitude of Washington music lovers in the matter. Seat and box reservations already made at the office of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey for the Boston Symphony season now are in sufficient volume to convince the orchestra management that three concerts in the Capital are amply justified.

The Washington concerts will be given in Constitution Hall at 4:40 p. m. on November 15, January 30 and April 4.

Some Star-Gazing.

With reference to forthcoming attractions in the local theaters, it may with impunity be remarked that an imposing array of stage stars have been signed for personal appearances at Loew's Fox Theater between now and Nov. 1, according to enthusiastic advices from City Manager Carter Barron of the Loew interests in this city.

Among the most eagerly awaited booking for the present month is that of the Boswell Sisters for the week beginning September 22. These vocal artists need no introduction to Capital theater and radio audiences.

The following week, September 29, Aimee Semple McPherson, guiding spirit of the famous Angelus Temple, will lend her evangelical spirit to the uplift of the vaudeville bill on the Fox stage by headlining its diverting roster of acts.

With the possibility that Cab Calloway and his Cotton Club Orchestra, or Alex Hyde and His Orchestra, or Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees will headline some one of the intervening weeks, Helen Morgan, America's foremost pianositter, screen, radio and musical comedy star, will hold the key spot on the stage the week of October 6.

Phil Lampkin, southpaw musical director at Loew's Fox, will celebrate the seventy-eighth week of his engagement on F street in conjunction with the engagement of the Boswell Sisters, week of September 22, by the rendition of a special overture explicitly fashioned for this particular occasion. The good Master Lampkin's record of continuous service now exceeds that of Wesley Eddy, long the local record holder, and is second only to that of the mellifluous Miss Maxine Doyle, at the Earle, now on six weeks' leave of absence to visit her home in California.

Metropolitan Reopens Today With Premiere

With new trimmings, new paint, fixtures, damask, screen and other improvements, Warner Bros. Metropolitan Theater reopens to the public tomorrow with a world premiere of "I Loved a Woman," First National's newest release, starring Kay Francis, Genevelve Tobin and Edward G. Robinson, as the inaugural attraction. The reopening also serves to introduce the Metropolitan's new "Season of Pledged Entertainment Hits."

Two of the truly great dramatic

artists of the present day are, for the first time, brought together as screen lovers in "I Loved a Woman." They are Kay Francis and Edward G. Robinson, each of whom has been starred separately in many pictures—in all of which they have given unforgetable characterizations.

In addition to Kay Francis, Edward G. Robinson and Genevieve Tobin, the cast includes such well-known players as J. Farrell MacDonald, Henry Kolker, Robert Barrat, George Blackwood, Murray Kinnell and Henry O'Neill. The film is based on a story by David Karsner, author of "Silver Dollar."

The short reel subjects for the reopening program will include a new Vitaphone subject, featuring Walter Donaldson, famed composer, presenting many of the popular compositions which he brought to the musical world. Also on the program is the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News, depicting world events from the four corners of the globe.

Musical Piece On the Screen

RKO-Keith's tomorrow is to present as the third attraction of its RKO "Greater Show Season" a film adaption of Noel Coward's sensationally successful operatta, "Bitter Sweet," presented to the American theater-going public by Florenz Ziegfeld and coming to the screen after many refusals by Coward to sell the film rights.

Coward wrote not only the very romantic love story told in "Bitter Sweet," but the lyrics and composed the music, as well. The outstanding hit, "I'll See You Again," is still extremely popular and is beautifully sung in the screen presentation.

"Bitter Sweet" is a story of true love—of a girl who gives up riches, position, protection, to elope with a penniless musician. In Vienna, the home of romance, almost it would seem since the world began, the couple sing and play in the streets and are terribly happy. Then they get work in a gay cafe and are not so poor, and not so happy, for trouble enters the paradise when a bold, bad captain tries by one foul means and another to steal the lovely Sari.

The cast was selected by United Artists for voice qualities as well as histrionic talents. When the picture opens at Keith's tomorrow, Anna Neagle, who is hailed as a finished actress, will be seen as the heroine opposite Fernand Graavey, an idol of Paris.

Irish Romance Reunites Pair

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter, enacting the jolliest and most outstanding roles of their film careers, will afford superb entertainment on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater in their latest joint screen venture, "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," which opens tomorrow.

With all the charm that has characterized her performances ever since her successful and never-to-be-forgotten role in "Seventh Heaven," Miss Gaynor grows increasingly appealing with the advent of every new film. In "Paddy," her whimsical brand of humor stands out against the stalwart qualities of Warner Baxter, who is the rich man enamored with this hoyden so deeply that he wins her in spite of his wealth.

"Paddy" is gorgeous in pictorial splendor, and is set against the background of an Irish coastal town, where a once influential family is reduced to circumstances that Janet tries to improve. Fearlessly she goes into the market place to dispose of her father's chattels so that the family may exist.

Miss Gaynor also brings forth a new character. Being a type who can not help from fibbing, her chief fault and favorite pastime is telling white lies merely for the fun she gets out of it. And her fibs, in the end, get her into such difficulties that their solution involves every member of the cast.

The cast supporting Miss Gaynor and Baxter has such notable personages as Walter Connally, noted stage star; Roger Imhof, Fisk O'Hara, Claire McDowell and others.

Local Actress, Spitalny Band

The stage and screen program opening tomorrow at Warner Bros. Earle Theater will be hailed by press and public as one of the finest entertainment bills seen in Washington in many months, the management confidently believes.

The screen feature is "One Sunday Afternoon," Paramount's picturization of the successful stage play, with Gary Cooper, Washington's own Frances Fuller and Fay Wray in the leading roles. The stage portion of the program headlines Phil Spitalny and his Golden Rod Orchestra, a famous radio presentation boasting 32 entertainers, including singers, dancers, instrumentalists and comedians.

"One Sunday Afternoon," adapted from the stage play which enjoyed a successful Broadway run, is a refreshing romance of the early 1900's. With Gary Cooper as its star, it concerns a dashing young blade who is blinded for life by love at first sight. Through love-blind eyes he worships a woman who really doesn't exist. This false memory becomes the bitter rival of the girl who gives him all her love and devotion.

The cast, in addition to Gary Cooper and Fay Wray, features Frances Fuller, well known in Washington, where she lived for many years with her uncle, James F. Byrne, United States Senator from South Carolina. Others in the cast are Roscoe Karns and Neil Hamilton.

Other acts on the program will be Smith, Strong and Lee in a hilarious laugh skit entitled, "Hi, Elmer;" Paul and Nina Ghezzi in feats of strength and skill, and Gracie Barrie as mistress of ceremonies.

Jack Holt in "The Wrecker" —Columbia.

Anna Neagle in "Bitter Sweet"—RKO-Keith's.

Homely Humor And Mme. Alda

The world's foremost cowboy-philosopher-actor, Will Rogers, is prescribing large does of genuine laughter and enjoyment as "Doctor Bull," the title of his latest screen hit, opening tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater.

As Dr. Bull, Rogers is enacting a role that not only features him in his most appealing picture, but one that is certain to win him a place higher on the ladder of popularity which he ascends a rung with each new screen effort.

On the Fox stage, the golden voice of Mme. Frances Alda, former prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and stage and radio star of eminence, vies for headline honors with the hilarious presentation of Dave Appolon and his "Surprises of 1933."

Appolon, in addition to his characteristic tomfoolery, presents Denzi Goodell, Norah Williams, Gean, Ruth and Gail and his string orchestra. Cass, Mack and Owen, with a mixture of novelty dances and acrobatics, are a third attraction on the current stage program.

The Will Rogers vehicle presents him in a role admirably fitted to his talents—that of a country doctor, who not only nurses the ailments of his fellow citizens, but their mental troubles as well. As Dr. Bull, he mixes romance with pills, scandal with powders, and with his shrewd philosophy prescribes great happiness for a whole town.

A Story Based On News Event

"The Wrecker" is a story by Albert Rogell, who also directed the production, which is based on the recent earthquake that rocked southern California. All the horror, panic and excitement of the few terrible minutes that an eye-witness describes as "a ten-second glimpse into eternity" are graphically reproduced in the closing sequences of this absorbing screen drama.

THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 14, 1933 Sports

Somerville Extended to Two Extra-Hole Matches in U. S. Amateur

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

A VISITOR to the city yesterday, Walter Johnson by name, was discussing the Washington ball club and the whys and wherefores of its virtual lock on the American League pennant.

It was no surprise that the conversation quickly turned to pitchers. Johnson used to do some pitching himself a while back and he has done tolerably well since then in developing a couple of youngsters, Monte Weaver and Monty Pearson, who among other things, are the most sensational rookies to break into the big leagues in the last three years.

So the Big Train should know whereof he speaks when he speaks of pitchers, and he minced no words yesterday, when the name of General Alvin Crowder was mentioned. To hear Johnson tell it, Crowder is the greatest pitcher in the American League, bar none.

A Pitcher for You.

"Now, there's a pitcher for you," said Johnson when somebody mentioned Crowder offhand. "There's nothing in the American League that can touch him, and that goes for the Groves, Whitehills and the Bridges. He'd be the first man I'd pick for my ball team.

"I told Grimith that last fall when he was handing me my discharge. I told him that there was one thing I wanted to tell him about his ball team before I left the club. I told him that Crowder was the greatest pitcher around the league and that if he were smart he'd treat Crowder right on the salary question for 1934 when it came up.

"Pitchers like Crowder come along once in a generation. He's got everything. Speed, curve, control and sense. He's the best worker I've ever seen. There was many a time last year when I'd look the bench over for a pitcher to work the day's game. Crowder would say, 'Gimme that ball.' And he went out and won 15 straight for me."

Four in One Week.

Joe Cronin has found Crowder the same kind of a worker. Those 22 victories with which he leads all pitchers in games won are no myth. But those 13 defeats he has absorbed are a bit misleading. Four of them he collected in one week, when he tried to rescue an overburdened pitching staff. Among the others are a pair of 2-to-1 defeats by Tommy Bridges, a 3-to-1 defeat by Monty Pearson, in which Crowder allowed five hits.

"Gimme that ball," is still Crowder's war cry. Cronin has never been at a loss for pitchers with Crowder on the club. He'd pitch every day if his young boss would let him. Cronin readily admits that Crowder has a rubber arm that is adversely affected by too-long rest periods.

There's no doubt about the pitcher who will start for the Nats in the opening game of the world series. Crowder asked for the job down in Biloxi last spring. And he wasn't foolin'.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Move over, Ellsworth Vines, and make room for Johnny Goodman . . . beaten in the national tennis tournament, Vines declared: "This is the happiest day of my life!" . . . beaten in the National Amateur golf tourney yesterday, Goodman said: "Egan is such a swell guy, you don't mind losing to him." . . . owners of the Nats and Giants stand to lose money if the world series goes only four games . . . the Nats have figured in two seven-game series . . . but the Yankees cost Owner Ruppert money by winning in four straight games the last three years they met the National Leaguers . . . people forget that Bucky Harris drove in more runs than any player in the 1924 world series . . . watch for The Post's unique world series contest . . . with tickets to all local games going to the winners . . . Judge Landis is the absolute ruler of the world series games . . . in 1931, when Landis was caught in a traffic jam in downtown Chicago, officials held up play for a half-hour until he arrived on the scene . . . he is the only gent, outside of the President of the United States and the working newspapermen, who rates an Anine Oakley to the world series.

Landis Calls Meeting To Make Series Plans

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP).—A meeting to make arrangements for the world series will be held tomorrow morning in the offices of Judge K. M. Landis, czar of baseball. All clubs with a mathematical chance have been invited.

The two league presidents, John Heydler, of the National, and Will Harridge, of the American, will attend.

Four Detroit Players Catch 150 Toadfish

Four members of the Detroit Tigers baseball team spent their day off yesterday fishing at Coples Point, hauling in the largest toadfish catch of the season. Fred Marberry, Gerald Walker, Ernie Schuble and Jonathan White were the players. They were conducted on the trip by Joe Hanline. Besides the 150 toadfish, the party pulled in four trout and 15 perch.

Nats Need 7 To Assure Flag Tie

Whitehill and Marberry Oppose Today in 1st of Tiger Series.

WITHOUT moving a muscle, the Nats moved nearer the pennant yesterday when Owner Clark Griffith stuck a hopeful palm out of the window of his Griffith Stadium office, sensed the patter of a half dozen raindrops and hung out the "No Game—Rain" sign.

Downtown at the same hour there was no evidence of rain, but there was indeed a slight precipitation out at Seventh street and Florida avenue, and with everything to gain and very little to lose, it required no great sacrifice for club officials to call the game off.

Canceled, Not Postponed.

It was a cancellation, not a postponement, for yesterday was to be the last appearance of the Cleveland Indians in the city, and there is now no provision for playing the game off at a later date. The cancellation reduced to 152 the regulation 154-game schedule of the Nats. The Yankees also were idle yesterday, the scheduled game having been played previously.

Thus the Nats have one less chance to lose the required number of eight games that they must drop before the Yankees can be figured as pennant winners.

Whereas yesterday the Nats required 8 victories in 15 games to clinch the pennant, today, as a result of cancellation, they require only 7 victories in 14 games to gain a tie even if the Yankees win all of their remaining 16 games. Should the Nats win 7 and lose 7, and the Yankees sweep their remaining 16 games, the final figures would be:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	98	54	.651

Tigers Arrive for Series.

Detroit's enfeebled Tigers slunk into town last night for the series opener with the Nats today, bearing the reputation of being the toughest customers the Nats have encountered all season. In 18 games with Detroit the Nats have won 10, the smallest margin they have shown against any individual club this year.

Manager Joe Cronin has Earl Whitehill dusted off and ready to fling at the Tigers today in the series opener with the prospect that the Nats will be called upon to face the shoots of Fred Marberry, whose most recent effort was a four-hit performance against the Yankees earlier in the week. Marberry was knocked out of the box twice in the last series between Washington and Detroit.

Cards Beat Dodgers; Dean Wins 20th Game

St. Louis, Sept. 13 (AP).—Pitching five-hit ball to win his twentieth game of the season, Dizzy Dean today outpointed Owen Carroll as the St. Louis Cardinals turned back the Brooklyn Dodgers, 4 to 1, in the first game of the series.

Dean, who struck out three to run his total for the season to 187, was given able assistance by Buddy Lewis.

Giants Drop Opener to Cubs, 2-0

Bush Tight in Pinches as Rain Halts Play for Two Hours.

Cubs Score Both Runs in First Inning Off Hubbell, Giant Ace.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13 (AP).—Playing in a steady rain, after a delay of 16 minutes at the start and nearly two hours between the second and third innings, the Chicago Cubs today reduced the New York Giants' advantage to six and one-half games as they defeated the league leaders 2 to 0 in the first contest of the six-game "last ditch" series.

Two games originally were scheduled but it took so long to play the first that the second contest was postponed and will be played as part of a doubleheader tomorrow. The two teams also meet in a twin bill Friday and a single game Saturday.

Bush Tight in Pinches

Guy Bush was on the pitching end of the shutout. The lanky Mississippian allowed nine singles and walked three but with men on the bases was practically invincible.

The Cubs scored both of their runs in the first inning off Carl Hubbell, the Giants' ace southpaw. The first run crossed the plate on successive singles by Bill Herman, Kiki Cuyler and Riggs Stephenson and the second on an error by Bill Terry on what would have been a double play.

Red Sox Beat Browns Behind Lloyd Brown

Boston, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, behind the six-hit pitching of Lloyd Brown, defeated the St. Louis Browns, 3 to 1, today in the final meeting of the season for the two teams. St. Louis took 13 of the 22 games played, and three of the last four.

Brown's southpaw slants puzzled his former teammates, and the only run they made was Sam West's homer in the sixth inning.

Roy Johnson, Sox fielder, suffered a sprained ankle when he ran to the fence, pulled down Hemsley's smash and then crashed into the barrier. He held onto the ball, but had to be carried from the field.

Strong Case Surgeon Is Granted New Trial

Detroit, Sept. 13 (AP).—Dr. A. L. La Ferte, Detroit surgeon, today was granted a new trial of the damage suit in which a Federal court jury awarded Ken Strong, professional football and baseball player, $75,000. The court ruled that the judgment was excessive.

Strong, who starred in athletics for New York University and later was signed by the Detroit Tigers, claimed his athletic career was ruined because Dr. La Berte removed the wrong bone in attempting to repair a wrist fracture that had healed improperly.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 13 (AP). He was 47 years old. He had umpired in the Southern Association for 20 years.

Giants Need Nine To Clinch Pennant

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—The National League pennant race was drawn a little closer today as the New York Giants lost and their nearest pursuers won.

The Giants' advantage over the Cubs and Pirates was reduced to 6½ games. With only 17 games left on their schedule, however, the Giants need but nine victories to clinch the flag, even if the Cubs sweep their remaining 14 contests and the Pirates take the 13 left on their schedule.

Dougan - Lopez Will Battle Tonight

By order of the Maryland State Boxing Commission, which ordered the entire card presented tonight, the Twin City promoters will cut themselves in on some of the famous Joe Turner wrestling weather, which habitually greets his grunt and groan boys, who are also performing tonight. The commission ordered the fights held tonight in order not to conflict with the Hans Birkie-Les Kennedy bout in Baltimore tomorrow night.

The card tonight will be presented intact, with Dougan and Lopez in the main event of eight rounds. Cowboy Hughey Gray will meet Roy Manley in a six-round semi-final, and other sixes will offer Pete Bevan and Kellar Crawford and Joe Gauzman against Sam Romano. A four-rounder between Jack Quigley and Sailor Leonard will open the show.

Fort Bouts Tomorrow.

The Fort Washington bouts, which lost a decision to Jupe Pluvius last Monday, will be held tomorrow night. The entire card, headed by cofeatures between Roddy Davis and Maxie Koshover, and Carey Wright and Pepper Young, will be presented.

A six-rounder between Bob Lowry and Soldier Clarke, and fours featuring Doug Swetnam against Soldier Shasburger, and Mickey Lewis vs. Soldier Larkin, will round out the bill.

Fischer Gets "Doggie" In National Amateur

Kenwood Country Club, Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 13 (Spl.).—Johnny Fischer, medalist, today made a "doggie" in the National Amateur.

There have been birdies, eagles and buzzards, but Fischer manufactured the first known "doggie" when he reached the seventh hole of his match with Gene Homans. A dog picked up Johnny's tee shot, dashed away, but quickly was trapped. The ball was replaced by the referee.

Pirates Buy Lavagetto.

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 13 (AP).—Harry "Cookie" Lavagetto, 18-year-old second baseman of the Oakland Coast League club, was sold today to the Pittsburgh Pirates. He will report next spring.

Upset Brings Goodman's Defeat

Bows to Veteran Egan, Who Loses to Munger; Fischer Defeated.

Somerville Forced to 21 Holes by Evans, 20 by Caldwell.

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 13.—Ernie Caldwell, 25-year-old Baltimore golfer, was on the brink of achieving fame in the second round of match play in the National amateur championship today.

An obscure player, virtually unknown to big-time competition, Caldwell carried one of the world's greatest shot makers, C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, of Canada, defending champion, to the twentieth hole before making his exit from one of the most spirited, sensational tournaments in all the 37 years of the classic.

Hanging on with death-grip tenacity for 19 holes in one of the day's most spectacular matches, the lanky Baltimorean, 1932 middle Atlantic champion, yielded to a curling 10-foot putt and a birdie 2 that were far superior to Caldwell's final effort on the second extra hole.

Had Beaten Evans.

Somerville's thrilling triumph over the obscure Caldwell climaxed a day of hysterical warfare along the bunkered Kenwood front for the cool-headed Canadian who, in his morning round, was forced to travel 21 holes before eliminating the formidable Chick Evans, twice former title holder.

Never before has any national amateur witnessed such a volcanic eruption of upsets as that which poured forth from this golfing battleground today.

The upheaval first started when the loquacious Johnny Goodman, 1932 "giant killer" and finalist, and National open king, was blasted out of the tournament in the opening round by 48-year-old Chandler Egan, of Medford, Oreg., champion in 1904-1905.

Before the withering fire of the gray-haired veteran from the Coast, Goodman passed out by a count of 2 up in one of the day's three most startling upsets.

Munger Ousts Egan.

Egan's stay in the tournament, however, was abruptly ended late in the afternoon. The luck of the draw pitted him against Jack Munger, of Dallas, Tex., the 18-year-old interscholastic champion, who, with Somerville, shared the medal lead on Monday.

Tied in the qualifying round at 150 with 12 others, and forced to play off for one of the eight places bright and early this morning, Egan cracked under the strain against young America, and Munger won by 5 and 4, nailing a 6-footer on the fourteenth hole for a birdie 3 to settle the issue. The man from Oregon, who won his first title 11 years before the Texan was born, walked off the green, his shoulders stooped, and iron tears rolling down his cheeks.

Among those who were victimized in the "sudden death" matches was Johnny Fischer, the home lad, who burned up the course yesterday to establish a new medal record and repeat his 1932 feat.

Bows to Yale Star.

After putting out Gene Homans, Englewood, N. J., and 1930 finalist, by 3 and 2, Fischer unceremoniously bowed to 22-year-old Sidney Noyes, former Yale golf star, by 1 up. Never ahead after the first hole and playing poorly throughout, Fischer exploded his chances on the 473-yard, par 5 seventeenth.

Zbyszko, Shikat Meet Tonight At Stadium

To Share Top Honors With Garibaldi and Slagel on Weekly Card.

ALTHOUGH two features are listed for tonight on the rassle card at Griffith Stadium—Wladek Zbyszko vs. Dick Shikat and Gino Garibaldi vs. Sol Slagel—it is the latter bout, between an orthodox and an unorthodox performer, which offers a puzzle. It promises much of everything, with the cash customer's particular interest centered in wondering just how Garibaldi can cope with the contortionistic and acrobatic tricks of his opponent.

Of course, it is just possible that Gino himself is not worrying, for he knows that Slagel's tricks are not used for throwing purposes, and he may decide to simply try to rough it out with his big adversary, wear him down to his size and then flop him for the count.

Made Savoldi Give Up.

Against Joe Savoldi some time ago Slagel threw the former Notre Dame gridman twice, and then made him finally quit in disgust, all in less than 20 minutes.

Zbyszko and Shikat are wrestlers of the old school, who do not take particularly to the new game of rassling. However, they have learned some of the latest tricks, do a little thor-hammering and charging now and then and can be counted upon to put up a good exhibition.

Three other bouts make up the grimance card. They call for Paul Boesch, a newcomer here, who made a hit in last week's show, taking on old Tigah Nelson, Cliff (Swede) Olsen; battling with the Mexican, Jaques Humberto, and George Zaharias, knees and all, clashing with Herb Freeman.

Choice Loses Decision By Nose

CHICAGO, Sept. 13 (AP).—Form players moaned after the running of the Jackson Park Purse today at Lincoln Fields, when J. J. O'Byrne's Chrysostom was defeated. Glynson, racing for A. B. Gallaher, of Louisville, Ky., a long shot, conquered the favorite by a nose in the seven furlongs event.

Jockey L. Ryder rode the winner, which led from flag fall to finish over a heavy track. Islam, also heavily backed by the public, was third. Only five horses started. The winner ran the distance in 1:28 3-5 and paid $26.66 in the $2 straight mutuels.

Jockey Charley Corbett holds the record thus far at Lincoln Fields in wining the daily double twice. He triumphed in the daily double on Labor Day here and this afternoon booted home Transcall and Silva in the second and third races, respectively. The daily double paid $156.74.

Dark Secret Belmont Victor.

Belmont Park Race Track, N. Y., Sept. 13 (AP).—After the running of the mile and a half Manhattan Handicap here this afternoon, all indications were that the Wheatley Stable's Dark Secret would replace M. L. Schwartz' Gusto as Equipoise's chief menace when the Jockey Club Gold Cup of two miles is decided here closing day. Gusto, which made such a promising showing behind "Ekky" in the Saratoga Cup, was no match for Dark Secret this afternoon, the latter scoring a very easy victory in the fast time of 2:30. Mr. Khayyam, from the Catawba Stable, was a poor third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Anson Burlingame, who served both as American Minister to China and Chinese Minister to America, filled the former position first by appointment of President Lincoln in 1861. He remained as Minister to China until 1867, when he resigned. The Chinese government immediately appointed him minister to head the Chinese diplomatic mission to the United, States and the principal European powers.

Burlingame took up his new duties in March, 1868, and was China's chief negotiator of the famous "Burlingame Treaty" by which is recognized many rights of the Chinese.

Before his diplomatic career, Burlingame gained distinction in State and National politics. He allied with the Free Soil party in 1848, was elected first to the House of Representatives as a "Know-Nothing," and later again as a member of the new Republican party.

Once challenged to a duel, he accepted, naming rifles as the weapons to be used, and Navy Island, a Canadian island above Niagara Falls, as the place. His challenger refused the conditions and the duel was never fought.

The century plant, contrary to popular notion, does not take a century to bloom. All bloom more than once a century, and some of the 150 odd species bloom every year. The century plant, or agave, as it is more correctly called, is cultivated in Mexico. Its leaves are used for fodder, the stalks for cordage, and the sap for the manufacture of liquor.

with Bill Bennings.

Lincoln Fields, Sept. 13.

Dear Al:

Managed to squeeze two winners out of the card today, which means that your pal, Bill, is still in a slump. In fact, I haven't had any luck since Ray Brennan left for old D. C. I was reminded of that fact when he sent me a wire (too late for you) on Granny's Trade, which paid a $27.60 mutuel at Rockingham. With my winners covered with chalk, I know you could have used that one. Haven't heard from Mike since I sent him to Havre de Grace to dig up some good things for next week. If you're downtown tomorrow look around those Ninth street pool rooms. Mike always thought he could make a million if he laid off horses and stuck to pool.

BILL.

First Race—Sun Thorn will find the track to his liking tomorrow. Seems like the spot for one of his good races, despite top weight and short price. Billie's Orphan and Alma S. for the other awards.

Second Race—Mamie D. won from a shifty group and gets the Bennings call in this field. Our Rose and Masked Prince appear to be the ones to beat.

Third Race—John Mill is far too fit to put any place except on top of the heap in a group of this kind. He has a tough race ahead, however, with Concisus expected to cause him trouble. A heavy track would give Duelist an excellent chance. This may be the sleeper.

Fourth Race—Liberty Oak will find the course to his liking tomorrow, and I wouldn't be surprised to see this one step down at around 8 to 1. Luna Bright is in fine form and will make a battle of it. Cash Surrender for the show end

Fifth Race—This race is tough pickings, and to make it worse I'm going after a long shot I mean Ellice. This one has been working in secret, and it looks like the spot to collect the overcoat money. Bedight and March King for the place and show.

Seventh Race—I'll take Our Justice in the final. Bantu's last was a beaut, but I can't fancy the stable winning at a short price. Popo to beat out Foxland Hall for the place.

Maryland U. Loses Sothoron, Backfield Star, Operated On for Appendicitis

Minion, Hand Injured, May Be Ready for Opening Game.

NORWOOD SOTHORON, figured to be the best all-round back on the University of Maryland football team this year, was operated on at George Washington University Hospital yesterday for appendicitis and will be lost for the season. As he is a senior, his football career with the Old Liners is ended.

Sothoron, who was kept out of the game a greater part of last season on account of illness, reported for practice Labor Day in fine fettle and was causing gratification among the coaches for the manner in which he was performing.

Best Defensive Back.

A fast, clever ball-carrying back, he was Maryland's best bet in the back field on defense. Sothoron, also a lacrosse player, should be ready for that game next spring. Sothoron's loss makes the sixth casualty among men expected to play a big part in Maryland's football this season, the others being for scholastic reasons or failure to return on account of financial stress.

Ed Minion Injured.

Ed Minion, counted upon to be a regular tackle, who broke a bone in his left hand, is the only other Old Liner who is injured badly enough at present to be out for any length of time. He probably will be ready for the opening game with St. John's September 30. Several others, including John Simpson, guard; Louis Ennis, end, and Dick Nelson, back, tentative first team members, are nursing minor hurts, but all should be back in action by the first of the week.

Goodman, Fischer Upset in Tourney

where he hooked his drive out of bounds, winding up with a 6 to lose the hole to Noyes. Fischer's last-ditch rally on the eighteenth died when Noyes dynamited masterfully out of a trap guarding the green and sank a 7-foot putt to gain a half in 4.

Anything could have happened today. It was a day that proved the uncertainty of golf, with champions, former champions, and near champions, falling before the mad onrush of youth.

With the "suicidal" matches over, an inventory discloses that only three veterans survived the heavy firing. From a field of 32 that started out this morning, only 8 remained in the running.

Egan's mastery of Goodman was a real sensation. Egan sank a 20-footer on the fourteenth to square the match after Goodman led at the turn, and as a parting shot the veteran ran down a curling 18-footer on the home green for a birdie 3. Egan's 70, 1 below par, equaled Turnesa's low score for the day, and was featured by a spectacular subpar 33 on the incoming nine.

Chick Evans played his heart out this morning against Ross Somerville, but to no avail. Tied at the turn, even at the end of the eighteenth, Evans went three extra holes with the champion before 3-putting the twenty-first green for a 6.

Caldwell and Somerville were even at the turn and then the Baltimorean went 1 up on the champion by winning the seventeenth, but Somerville sank a brilliant 15-footer to square the match on the home hole. Caldwell sank an 8-footer for a half on the twentieth. On the fatal twenty-first, Caldwell's tee shot hit Somerville's ball, knocked it 8 feet toward the pin and the champion won the match with a 9-foot putt.

G.U. Line Shows Driving Power In Drill

GEORGETOWN grid candidates engaged in a brisk 45-minute scrimmage in the drizzle yesterday. The line showed an increased driving power on the offensive that was pleasing to the Hoya mentors, who have adopted a very pessimistic outlook on the team as a whole.

A good exhibition of punting was given by the back field, which gained many yards. The squad came out of the scrimmage in good shape, with only a few cuts and bruises.

Thirty-two candidates for the freshman squad reported to Coach Danner and were given a light workout. The remaining plebe candidates are expected to report today, and the entire frosh squad will be subjected to longer and harder workouts to toughen them up for scrimmage with the varsity.

Foxx Hits 45th Homer; Chicago Has 12-to-10 Edge for Season.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 13 (AP). The Athletics and Chicago White Sox wound up their season's series by dividing a double-header today, the Sox winning the opener, 3 to 2, and dropping the nightcap, 4 to 2.

Sam Jones blanked the Athletics in the opener until Jimmy Foxx and Roger Cramer hit home runs in the eighth inning—Foxx's forty-fifth hit of the season. Al Simmons hit a homer off Rube Walberg in the first half of the same inning.

Vines Returns Home; No Blare of Trumpets

There was no blare of trumpets to herald his arrival, as has been the case on his two previous triumphant returns.

His mother, younger brother Ed, and the neighbors were the only ones to greet the conquered hero. But they were all the 21-year-old star desired.

Bucs Beat Braves, 1-0; French Stars

Pittsburgh, Sept. 13 (AP).—Turning in their third straight shut-out, the Pittsburgh Pirates today defeated the Boston Braves, 1 to 0, as Larry French shaded Ben Cantwell in a pitching duel.

French held the Braves to four singles in as many innings, while Cantwell was touched for seven, three in the first inning, when the Pirates scored the only run of the contest. With two out, Freddie Lindstrom drove out a double, the only extra-base hit of the game, and came romping home on Pie Traynor's single. "Arky" Vaughan followed with another one-bagger, but Gus Suhr lined to Jordan for the third out.

Pegler

Feels That Ross Has Good Prospects of Becoming Even Better Man.

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—It is just as well for the fair name of the prize-fighting profession that Tony Canzoneri did drop in a few little punches to the south of Barney Ross' foul-line because, without the penalties for these infractions, Tony would have run up the higher score and that would have won back the lightweight title for him.

And there you would have had the makings of another of those embarrassing scandals which shake the profession of pugilism to its very well-springs, as the old phrase goes, every now and again.

Ross whipped Canzoneri quite apart from the penalties. He outfought him most of the way and did that despite the fact that he is still a little immature in some of his work, especially in he use of the right hand, which he does not employ so much for punching as for pounding.

Has Chance to Get Better.

If Ross minds his lessons and memorizes the illustrations in the book on the knack of dealing his fellow man right-hand pokes in the face, he will be an even better prize fighter a year from now than he was on Tuesday night when he was good enough to lick the No. 2 man. With only half a right and lacking that practiced grace of Tony's, which enables him to emerge from any mixup in a balanced fighting attitude, Ross was so busy and regardless, always intent upon his own doing and so little concerned as to anything which Canzoneri might do that there was generally too much of him for Tony to handle.

He can be polished up somewhat and he probably will improve, for he is young and still coming along in his trade. If Tony couldn't earn a plurality in two attempts at the present stage of Ross' development he needn't hope to do so, as Ross gets better and he, himself, declines.

Ready With Punches.

Several times Ross whirled out of some mixup with his legs in a snarl and tramping on his own toes, but quick as Tony was to charge into him the kid champion was ready and punching any old how as he came in. Once he floundered half-way across the ring from a right swing high on the head, but his hands were still churning even as he went away and Tony ran into a fighter, not a victim, as he followed through to take advantage of the instant. He is not a picture fighter, but when he lays his knuckles in they always take some toll in hurt and he is gaited so fast that he spends no time in graceful feinting and deliberation.

Still the official jury divided so that only by the subtraction of three rounds from Canzoneri's score for fouling was Ross confirmed in his title and justice done. Arthur Donovan, the referee, disclosed that in his score, which finally decided the fight, he penalized Tony that much for careless aiming, and moreover that these were rounds which otherwise would have gone to Canzoneri.

Will Help Interest.

This fact will contribute to the interest in another return fight.

It does seem that only the garden corporation can conduct a fight in the grand manner in New York, for Tim Mara's police work with the crowd was very careless, and innocent customers found themselves being moved around and reached over by a mob of gamblers of the familiar Broadway rodent type throughout the spectacle.

Between rounds there was a rush of gamblers through all the ringside aisles, and the betting continued almost to the end of the fight. As matters turned out, the man who actually won the prize fight also won the decision, but if the verdict had gone the other way there probably would have been rumors of the kind usually described as sinister.

Passers Map Air Attack For Bears

PRESEASON conditioning of the Washington Passers, newly organized local professional football team, is being concentrated on aerial warfare in preparation for their first game of the season against the Chicago Bears at Griffith Stadium on October 11.

Mentors of the Passers are confident that in developing a team dedicated almost solely to a wide open aerial game, they will be able to offer the average football fan a game more to his liking than the closely played, ground game usually offered.

The Chicago Bears are headed by Red Grange, of University of Illinois fame. Bronko Negurski and Jack Manders, erstwhile Minnesota stars, as well as Bill Nesbit, formerly of Michigan, will appear with the Bears here.

Many outstanding local college favorites of last year will appear in the line-up of the Passers. All games will be played at Griffith Stadium. The Passers have definitely signed to meet the New York Giants on October 25 and the Brooklyn Dodgers on November 8. Tentative arrangements have been made to bring teams from Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Portsmouth here on open dates.

9 Federal Teams In Bowl League

Nine aggregations, representing Bureau of Investigation, Commerce, Government Printing Office, Internal Revenue, Navy Yard, National Capitol Parks, Patent Office, Post Office and the Veterans Administration already have been enrolled.

The Officers this year for the league will be L. J. Bittner, president, A. D. Beavers, vice president, and Chas. E. Barnard, secretary-treasurer. The officers of the league are anxious to secure one more team to complete the league, which will operate on a handicap basis. Players employed by the Federal or District Government are eligible. The league will open its season Monday, September 25, on the Arcadia alleys.

Those interested in obtaining the remaining franchise call Lincoln 9485 for further information.

U. S. Employes Name Babcock New President

E. Claude Babcock, former secretary of the Civil Service Commission, last night was unanimously elected president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

The election concluded the Federation's three-day convention at the Hamilton Hotel. Delegates earlier in the day amended their constitution to make both offices full time, with salaries of $5,000 and $2,500, respectively.

Babcock Notified.

Babcock, who is now in San Francisco in charge of the Civil Service Commission's twelfth district, was notified of his selection by wire. He had previously agreed to accept the office if it were tendered. He resigned as secretary of the commission when the offices of secretary and chief examiner recently were combined.

Mr. Glass and Elmer H. Bailey, of this city, and Edgar Hobbs, of Baltimore, were elected vice presidents for the fourth district, comprising Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

The following additional vice presidents were elected:

First District, New England, John Green, of Boston; Second District, New York and upper New Jersey, Grant Frick, of New York; Third District, Pennsylvania, Delaware and lower New Jersey, John F. Daniels, of Philadelphia; Sixth District, Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, J. A. Campbell, of Cincinnati; Seventh District, northern half of Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, Edgar M. Carpenter, of Detroit; Eleventh District, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, Perry Myers, of Seattle; Twelfth District, California, Arizona and Nevada, Lloyd Wimer, of Sunnydale, Calif.

New York Selected.

Vice presidents for the Fifth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth and Thirteenth Districts will be chosen later by the federation's executive council. The group voted to hold its next convention in New York.

A plea for merger of rival Federal employe interests last night appeared to have come too late to bridge the gap between the two.

Harry B. Mitchell, Civil Service Commission chairman, suggested the groups get together in an address yesterday before the convention.

Late last night neither organization had made a gesture of willingness to comply.

"Why should men and women with the same ideas and ideals fight each other? There is no sense in it," Mitchell said in his address.

He added that a new system of efficiency ratings was being worked out in answer to criticism of prevailing methods. He defended the President's executive orders affecting the Civil Service, and declared Mr. Roosevelt would do his part "in building up a real Civil Service."

Other Resolutions.

Other resolutions adopted favored bringing the Library of Congress under the Civil Service; another, repeal of the married workers' law, and still another asked 30 days annual leave and 30 days sick leave for Federal workers. Delegates voted against free hospitalization for Federal workers. Miss Esther Penn, Seattle delegate, read a message of felicitation from President Roosevelt.

Teller Goes Free In Bank Shortage

Jury Refuses to Indict After Restitution.

Although he wrote a letter to Thomas P. Hickman, conservator for the Franklin National Bank, admitting shortage in his accounts, C. Bertram Gelston, a former teller, will not face criminal charges, the District grand jury yesterday determined when it refused to indict him.

The jurors were informed that Gelston had made restitution of $7,221.09 which he was allegedly short, through his attorney, Paul Elcan.

First intimation officers of the bank had of a shortage was the receipt by Hickman of a letter from Gelston. This letter reads: "I have personally embezzled several thousand dollars from the bank. No one had knowledge of this fact, and I alone am responsible." It was dated July 22.

Husband Shot After Quarrel Before Child

Wife Tells Police She Saw Him Fire; Planned Parting.

Herbert L. Rash, 28, of Alexandria, lay in Emergency Hospital last night critically wounded by a bullet that had passed through his body, barely missing his heart. There was a powder burn near the wound.

The shooting followed an argument with his wife, Mrs. Ollie B. Rash, in a back bedroom at 1740 Pennsylvania avenue northwest late yesterday. Mrs. Rash told police her husband had shot himself. She said he handed her five bullets from the .32-caliber revolver, saying one would be enough, and then shot himself. Rash corroborated her story before losing consciousness. Police learned he bought the revolver Saturday.

Mrs. Rash, who has a 4-year-old daughter, Patsy, had contemplated leaving her husband. Cloty F. Snyder and his wife, in whose apartment the shooting occurred, had consented to her staying with them. They did not witness the shooting, but said the child did.

Rash was employed as a weigher by the McGuire & Rolfe Co., construction jobbers, on Thirtieth street.

Unemployed Man Found Dead in Gassed Room

Baltimore Man Missing, His Truck Found Here

Police were asked yesterday to search for Samuel Paul, 39, Baltimore produce dealer, missing since September 7.

Splash!

Mathews, colored grass cutter in the vicinity of the Titanic Memorial, was at his task a month ago, when horse and mower dove into the Potomac. After several hours they were retrieved by the Fire Rescue Squad.

Mathews got another horse. Yesterday he stopped his outfit to remove a stone.

Balderdash, the steed who pulled the contrivance, took a plunge and mower and horse went into the river. While Mathews pondered fate, Balderdash swam to the opposite shore. Police pulled out the mower with a hoist.

Five Brutality Cases Pending Against Police

Hearings of Charges on Two to Be Resumed Wednesday.

Hearings on cases of five policemen involved in charges of beating prisoners were continued yesterday by the Police Trial Board.

Cases of Charles C. Williams and Frank Ashley, Second Precinct policemen, accused of "third-degree brutality" against George Mahoney, colored prisoner, will be resumed Wednesday. Additional evidence remains to be heard.

Consideration of the status of James A. Mostyn and William R. Laflin, of the First Precinct, was put off two weeks. Both are serving year sentences for assault on a prisoner. The board will take action to dismiss or retain the men who are now suspended.

Hearing on First Precinct Policeman J. G. Middleton, accused of beating Mrs. Dorothy E. Wood and George Burrell, both colored, also was continued. Middleton was accused by Walter B. Sanderson, Fourth Precinct patrol wagon driver, colored, of striking the two.

Baby Cries Self to Sleep When Kitty Strays Away

Three-year-old Betty Lewis, 3242 Thirty-eighth street northwest, sobbed herself to sleep last night. The chum, whose companionship has been the greatest joy of her little life, was lost, and they had not told each other good night, as had been their practice for so long.

Kitty, Betty's 2-month-old kitten, wandered off late yetserday and Betty and her parents, Lieut. M. L. Lewis, searched for her in vain. Kitty is small and gray. She has four white paws and a white throat.

'Wise Guy'

Paquale Iacangelo "Knows His Bill," Phony Passer Indicted.

Paquale Iacangelo, Georgia avenue shop keeper, knows his $5 bills, as witness the indictment of two men yesterday after one of them had passed a "phony" on him.

John William Miller made a 10-cent purchase and tendered a dirty $5 in payment. He was given the change but Paquale was suspicious. He notified police. Miller and a companion, John Murray, were arrested. Secret service men reported finding a $5 counterfeit bill on Miller, and four $10 counterfeit bills on Murray.

Aid Promised Teachers Hit In Saving Plan

Board to Consider Cases of Those Quitting to Save Husband's Jobs.

Relief of teachers, who gave up their jobs so that their husbands might keep their positions in the Government, will be considered by the Board of Education.

At the first meeting of the new term yesterday, on motion of Henry I. Quinn, it was decided to appoint a committee to consider the applications of such teachers for reinstatement. The committee will confer with the corporation counsel on the necessary legal machinery that will have to be set up to undertake the work. Eighteen teachers are said to be affected.

The move on behalf of the teacher-wives of Government employees was taken after the board agreed to retain the services of Mrs. Page Kirk, teacher of mechanical drawing at Western High School. Mrs. Kirk had planned to resign from the school service so that her husband might keep his position in the geological survey. The board was advised yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Ickes that Mrs. Kirk's reemployment would not affect her husband's position at this time.

Powell School Problem.

Utilization of the Johnson School as an addition to the Powell Junior High School on Hiatt place northwest, was decided on in the face of the protests of a delegation from Columbia Heights.

Members of the delegation, presenting a petition signed by 104 patrons of the Johnson School, claimed they had not been notified of the plan to transfer elementary school children from the Johnson to the Bancroft School, several blocks away.

School officials contended ample notice hade been given of the transfer plans. Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, declared that if the Powell Junior High School did not receive the additional accommodation the graduates of the Cooke School would not be able to receive junior high school tuition.

The board agreed to retain as many elementary children as possible at the Johnson school. Efforts will be made to avoid transfer of kindergarten and first and second grade children. Traffic dangers was one of the chief arguments advanced by the citizens.

Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou was instructed to work out means of cooperating with the local NRA in pledge cards canvassing.

Nonresident Rules Waived.

Rules governing nonresident pupils were waived in the cases of a number of students wishing to enter the Wilson and Miner Teachers' Colleges. The students were given the right to enter the colleges because they make their homes with relatives in the District.

Announcement was made that night schools in the White divisions will operate on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, instead of Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

NRA Teeth

More Money, More Time, More Visits to Dentists.

Georgetown University officials credit the NRA with a marked increase in the number of patients at dental offices and infirmaries.

Records at the Georgetown Dental School, according to Dean William N. Cogan, indicate that former unemployed workers, under the protection of the Blue Eagle, are once more evincing interest in the care of teeth.

"During the years of the depression," Dr. Cogan said yesterday, "unemployment and low wages brought about general neglect of the teeth. Since the NRA program has restored thousands to the pay rolls and provided more hours of leisure, there has been a marked increase in visits to the dentist."

An eight-hour day for registered nurses has been recommended by the American Nurses Association as a cooperative step in the NRA campaign, although its approximately 90,000 members are not covered by a code.

The association urges that "an attempt should be made to approach reasonable working conditions by encouraging, wherever possible, in the interest of the patient, as well as the nurse, an eight-hour day for those employed on a daily basis, and a 48-hour week for those employed on a weekly or monthly schedule."

Pointing out that shorter hours will spread work, the association's board of directors stated thousands of registered nurses are without jobs.
